PREFACE

THERE are Biographical Dictionaries which contain lives of Indian celebrities, and there are many biographies of individuals who have distinguished themselves in India. But the Dictionaries are large, expensive works, and the separate "Lives" or "Memoirs" are often lengthy or inaccessible. There is no single volume of moderate size, containing such information as is sufficient for the ordinary reader, regarding the careers and doings of the large number of persons connected with India, in history, by their exploits, services, and writings. The object of this "Dictionary of Indian Biography" is to supply this want. It purports to be a handy Work of Reference, giving the main facts of the lives of about 2,600 persons—English, Indian, Foreign, men or women, living or dead—who have been conspicuous in the history of India, or distinguished in the administration of the country, in one or other of its branches, or have contributed to its welfare, service, and advancement by their studies and literary productions, or have gained some special notoriety. Such a work must be limited by considerations of time, space, and cost. It has been thought desirable to commence the present volume from about 1750 A.D., a date which admits of the inclusion of Lord Clive and his contemporaries in Southern India, when the English power in India was being established. It has been found necessary to treat the lives in an indicative rather than in an exhaustive manner. It is impossible to include everybody who has been in India, and nothing has been harder than the attempt to fix a standard of merit to entitle its possessor to inclusion. No one consulted has been able to suggest a criterion of "distinction." The titles and decorations of the various Orders of Knighthood afford no certain ground. A complete and full Biographical Dictionary for India could only be undertaken, and might well be undertaken, by Government Agency, or under a financial guarantee of the cost of production. In all the difficulties of the problem, it is only possible, to decide, for inclusion or exclusion, upon general principles, general reputation, or notoriety: and the many persons omitted for want of space are likely to challenge the conclusions of the Editor. Again, in such a work, unintentional omissions are sure to occur, in spite of all precautions, but they can be supplied in future editions. In many cases, even of prominent names, sufficient biographical information is not available, or, at any rate, has not come to hand. It is equally impossible to avoid, entirely, mistakes of dates or facts: the sources of information consulted often disclose discrepancies, which personal knowledge has sometimes been able to determine. Accuracy has been a main object in the compilation, but the short lives cannot be made more accurate than the sources of information permit. In the Addenda will be found a few notices which were accidentally omitted from the body of the work, or were obtained too late to be included in their proper places.

A copious Bibliography has been appended. It contains the names of a number of works which may advantageously be consulted by those who are desirous of acquiring a greater knowledge of the individuals treated in the Dictionary of Indian Biography, or of the history of India, than can be conveyed in the brief notices in the Dictionary itself. It will also be useful to the general reader of Indian literature. A separate list of the chief Works of Reference consulted is subjoined to this Preface.

The Indian names of places have been spelt, for the most part, according to the Jonesian (or Hunterian) system of transliteration adopted by the Government of India. But that system allows, by way of compromise, a number of names, which have in times past been spelt phonetically, to retain their popular, though irregular, forms. Opinions differ as to the extent to which such disregard of strict transliteration may be permitted. In this work, some of the familiar words have been retained, and, in all cases, the attempt has been made to adapt the spelling to the plain and simple sound of a word: no dots or accents have been used. The Indian names of persons have been arranged on a system by which they can be most easily found. In many cases, the territory with which the person is connected supplies the keyword. In the case of Hindus, not designated territorially, the family name should be first sought. In some cases (e.g. among the Parsis), where the family name has been dropped, the name which is used as a surname is put first. In the case of some Hindus, and of Muhammadans, who have no name common to all the members of a family, the arrangement is according to the first names in their alphabetical order. Some common names have been spelt in the different ways which their owners have adopted for themselves.

The greater portion of the compilation, as well as the editing, has fallen on the Editor. At the same time, his acknowledgments are due to all who have afforded him assistance and information. He has specially to thank Mr. H. Wigram, of the Madras Civil Service (retired), now of Messrs. Swan, Sonnenschein & Co., for his co-operation and ready counsel; the Editor of the Athenæum for kindly permitting the publication of lists of names in his Journal: the officers in charge of the India Office Library, for their unfailing courtesy and stores of knowledge put at his disposal: and certain officers in India for their welcome help: their names are not mentioned, lest it should be supposed that any portion of the Dictionary has any official authority.

Corrections and suggestions will be thankfully received.

THE EDITOR.

ABERIGH - MACKAY, GEORGE ROBERT (1848-1881)

Born July 25, 1848: son of Rev. Dr. James Aberigh-Mackay, Chaplain in Bengal: educated privately in Scotland, at Magdalen College School, Oxford, and St. Catherine's College, Cambridge: entered the Education Department at Bareilly in the N. W. P., 1870: Professor of English Literature at the Delhi College, 1873: Tutor to the Raja of Ratlam, Central India, and Principal of the College there, 1876: Principal of the Rajkumar College at Indore, 1877: Fellow, Calcutta University, 1880: wrote a number of educational works: also Notes on Western Turkistan, a Hand-book of Hindustan, a Manual of Indian Sport, Native Chiefs and their States, The sovereign Princes and Chiefs of Central India: at one time wrote largely for the Pioneer, and constantly for other English and Indian papers, including letters in the Bombay Gazette under the nom de plume "The Political Orphan": but his best work was his Twenty-one Days in India, being the Tour of Sir Ali Baba, a series of sketches of Indian life and society which appeared in Panthy Fair in 1878-9, and were afterwards published together. For brilliant wit, his work has not been approached in modern days in India. His bright and sympathetic humour, his "suspicion of cynicism which is the soul of modern pathos," his freedom from malice, his command of style and language, the keen edge and truth of his criticisms, his grasp and range, took the public by storm: a distinguished literary career lay before him, when he died, Jan. 12, 1881, from tetanus, caused by a chill caught at lawn-tennis: he was also an ardent sportsman, and lover of birds and animals.

ABRAHAMS, LIONEL (1860-)

B.: through the mutiny as A.A.G. for Royal Artillery: with General Windham at Cawnpur and at the defeat of the Gwalior contingent, Dec. 6, 1857: commanded the R.A. in Madras in 1859: D.A.G. of Artillery in India, 1863; in the Sitana (Umbeyla) campaign: Director of Artillery at the War Office, 1870: to the Crimea in 1872, to report on the British cemeteries and monuments: Governor of R.M.A. Woolwich, 1875: wrote largely on the question of the Russians in Central Asia and on Afghanistan, opposing a forward policy: Surveyor-General of Ordnance, 1880: Chief of the Staff to Lord Wolseley in the Egyptian campaign, 1882: Governor of Gibraltar, 1883-1886: K.C.B. in 1873: Commander of the Legion of Honour, 1874: G.C.B. in 1882, and the Order of the Medjidie: General, Nov. 20, 1884: died Aug. 26, 1900. He wrote on India, viz., The Defence of Cawnpur, Sitana, a Mountain Campaign, Indian Frontier History, and an autobiography.

AFGHANISTAN, ABDUR RAHMAN, AMIR OF (1844-1901)

Son of Afzal Khan, and grandson of the Amir Dost Muhammad: confirmed by Shir Ali, in 1863, in a government in Turkistan: took part in the civil war between his father and his uncle Shir Ali (q.v.): escaped to Bokhara when his father was imprisoned in 1864: collected a force and defeated Shir Ali at Shekhabad in May, 1866, and recovered Kabul for his father: on the latter's death, in 1867, became C. in C. to his uncle Muhammad Azim: retired to Balkh: he was defeated at Tlnak Khan, by Yakub on behalf of Shir Ali, on Jan. 3, 1869, and made for Bokhara, receiving an allowance from Russia: remained for 10 years at Samarkand. In 1880 he watched events from Balkh, and, when Yakub Khan abdicated and was sent to India, negotiations were opened with Abdur Rahman, who proceeded to Charikar, was recognised as Amir of Kabul by the British Government in July, 1880, and finally nominated Amir on Aug. 10: he subsequently occupied Kandahar when evacuated by the British forces, lost it to his uncle Ayub Khan (q.v.) in 1881, but personally recovered it from Ayub in Sep. 1881: established his power throughout Afghanistan, and had frontier disputes with Russia: visited the Viceroy, Lord Dufferin, at Rawul Pindi, March, 1885, to discuss Afghan affairs, and was then made G.C.S.I. At the time of the Penjdeh incident with Russia, in April, 1885, he showed great forbearance. He had to repress risings in various parts of the kingdom: defeated his cousin Ishak, Governor of Turkistan. In 1893 he received Sir M. Durand's mission to settle a number of frontier questions, which at times had nearly led to hostilities with the British. He ruled with a rod of iron. G.C.B., 1895: disappointed at not being allowed to have a diplomatic agent resident in London, for which he asked through his son Nasrulla, in 1895. During his reign he employed English firms and experts to work for him at Kabul, and greatly strengthened his kingdom and military power, but maintained the traditional Afghan policy of keeping foreigners in general out of his country: in an autobiography he showed his confidence in the British alliance: he died Oct. 3, 1901.

AFGHANISTAN, DOST MUHAMMAD KHAN, AMIR OF (1791-1863)

Twentieth son of Payinda Khan (executed 1799), who was chief of the Barakzais, and brother of Fateh Khan, the Barakzai "Mayor of the Palace" of Mahmud Shah, of the Abdalis, or Duranis. As the result of the fighting among the members of the Durani and Barakzai families from the time of Payinda Khan, Dost Muhammad established himself in 1822-3 in Kabul, Kashmir having been lost to the Sikhs in 1819, Herat and Peshawar not being in his power. He defeated Shah Shuja, the Sadazai or Durani, late Amir, at Kandahar in 1833:

but lost Peshawar to the Sikhs in 1834: styled himself Amir in 1833. In 1837 Burnes was sent on an embassy to Kabul, to oppose Persian designs on Herat: Dost Muhammad was found to be intriguing with Russia, and a Russian Envoy appeared at Kabul: Lord Auckland's Government decided to depose Dost Muhammad and reinstate Shah Shuja as Amir: on the approach of the British force in 1839 Dost Muhammad fled to Bokhara, but escaped, advanced on Kabul, made a stand at Bajbah, but was defeated and fled again: after a success against the English at Parwandarra, he surrendered, Nov. 3, 1840, to the English envoy and was sent down to Calcutta: at the end of the first Afghan war, in 1842, he returned to Kabul and resumed his reign: in the Panjab campaign of 1848-9, he sent assistance to the Sikhs: he concluded the treaty of Peshawar with the Governor-General in March, 1855, by which the independence of Afghanistan was recognised: and a subsidy was given to him, under an agreement made in Jan. 1857: he regained Kandahar in Jan. 1856: remained quiet and staunch to the British during the mutiny: established his power throughout Afghanistan, capturing Herat, May 27, 1863: died at Herat, June 9, 1863; was a strong ruler, and leader of men, but cruel and unscrupulous.

AFGHANISTAN, SHIR ALI, AMIR OF (1820-1879)

Fifth son of Dost Muhammad (q.v.), whom he accompanied in exile to India: succeeded him on his death, at Herat, in 1863, being recognised by the Government of India: civil war ensued between him and his brothers. He lost his eldest son, Muhammad Ali, in the battle of Kajhbaz, in 1865, when he defeated his brother Muhammad Amir and took Kandahar: lost Kabul to his nephew, Abdur Rahman: imprisoned, 1864, his brother Afzal, who regained his freedom after the battle of Shekhabad in May, 1866, was proclaimed Amir, but died 1867. Shir Ali at one time had lost Kabul and Kandahar, but, having recovered Kabul from his brother Muhammad Azam, defeated Abdur Rahman (q.v.), son of Afzal, on Jan. 3, 1869, drove him out and was recognised as Amir by the Government of India. Lord Mayo received him in darbar at Umbala in 1869. Shir Ali returned disappointed from the darbar, and showed resentment at the failure of his requests and his subsequent treatment by the British Government: in 1873 he sent an envoy, Saiyad Nur Muhammad, to India, to make certain proposals, which were not accepted: negotiations took place in 1877 between the envoy and Sir L. Pelly, on behalf of the Governor-General, Lord Lytton, but were fruitless. Abdullah Jan, named in 1873 as his heir, died in 1877. In 1878 Shir Ali was found to have received, at Kabul, a Russian mission under General Stolietoff: he stopped Sir Neville Chamberlain's mission at Ali Masjid, and the second Afghan war ensued. On the approach of the British forces, Shir Ali fled from Kabul and died at Mazar-i-Sharif, in Afghan Turkistan, on Feb. 21, 1879.

AGA ALI SHAH (? -1885)

Like his father, Aga Khan, the spiritual head of the Khoja community, from whom he received tribute in Asia and Africa: best known to Englishmen as a keen sportsman, a strong supporter of the turf: Member of the Bombay Legislative Council: succeeded by his son, Aga Sultan Muhammad Shah: died in 1885.

AGA KHAN (1800-1881)

The venerable spiritual head of the Khoja community, of Shia Muhammadans: descendant of the mysterious and dreaded "old man of the mountains": claimed to be descended from Ali and Fatima: fled from Persia 40 years before his death, after an attempt to gain the Persian throne, at which his family aimed: assisted the British with his light horse in the Afghan war, 1842: received Rs. 1,000 a month as pension: resided a short time in Calcutta, and then 30 years in Bombay, holding his court in grand style, and taking a leading part in turf and sporting matters: the keenest racing man in India: exercised almost absolute control over his subjects, "a king without a territory," the annual tribute from his followers amounting to a lakh of rupees: died April 12, 1881.

Anderson to Multan, to introduce both a change in the personnel of the native Government and new fiscal arrangements : they were treacherously attacked on April 20, 1848, wounded and subsequently murdered by Mulraj's retainers, with his knowledge : this outrage led to the second Sikh War of 1848-9, after which the Panjab was annexed.

AGNEW, SIR WILLIAM FISCHER (1847-1903)

Son of General Agnew, of the Indian Staff Corps : called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn, 1870 : joined the bar of the Calcutta High Court : edited, from 1877, the Indian Law Reports, Calcutta : was Law Lecturer, Presidency College, 1879 : Recorder of Rangoon, 1884-1900, officiating in 1885-6 as a Judge of the Calcutta High Court : knighted, 1899 : retired in 1900 : edited several books on Indian Law : died Dec. 26, 1903.

AHLIA BAI (? -1795)

Wife of Khandi Rao Holkar, (who died 1754), son of Malhar Rao Holkar, of Indore. On the latter's death, in 1765, Mali Rao, son of Khandi and Ahlia, succeeded to the throne, but died in 9 months. Then Ahlia assumed the government, chose Takaji Holkar as her minister, and ruled till her death in 1795. She transacted business daily, unveiled, in open darbar from 2 p.m. : had great ability and character, was deeply religious, and governed admirably.

AHMAD KHAN, SIR SYAD, KHAN BAHADUR (1817-1898)

Educational reformer : born Oct. 17, 1817, at Delhi, of a noble family : his ancestors came into India from Central Asia, and held high office under the Mogul Emperors : he entered Government service in 1837 and rose to be a subordinate Judge in the N.W.P. In the mutiny he rendered faithful service to the British at Bijnur, saving their lives : he wrote a pamphlet in Urdu on the causes of the mutiny. He was devoted to antiquarian research and was a Member of the Royal Asiatic Society : in 1864 he formed a Translation Society at Ghazipur (afterwards moved to Aligarh) and had several valuable English works translated into Urdu. He visited England in 1869, and left his son (afterwards Mr. Justice Mahmud of the Allahabad High Court), to be educated at Cambridge. He wrote a reply to Sir W. W. Hunter's work on The Indian Mussalmans—are they bound in Conscience to rebel against the Queen? In 1876 he retired from Government service, and in 1877 commenced the Anglo-Oriental College at Aligarh. He was a Member of the Legislative Council, N.W.P. and an Additional Member of the Governor General's Legislative Council, 1878-1882 : was made a K.C.S.I. in 1888 : a man of extreme courtesy combined with personal dignity : to his College he devoted his whole energy and means : died March 27, 1898 : wrote Archæological History of Delhi 1847 : F.R.A.S. 1864.

AHMAD SHAH ABDALI, or DURANI (? -1772)

Co.'s military service at 16: Interpreter at Surat in 1823: transferred to Cutch in 1825: sent, in 1830, on a mission, with a gift of horses, to Ranjit Singh at Lahore, and to explore the country: in 1832, travelled, under the orders of Government, in N. India, Afghanistan, Bokhara and Persia: in England in 1833-5, was lionized as a traveller: received the medal of the Royal Geographical Society, and elected member of learned Societies: on return to India, he succeeded, by negotiation at Hyderabad (Sind), in warding off war with the Amirs, who agreed to a survey of the Indus: in 1836, Burnes was sent on a mission, nominally commercial, but really political, to Dost Muhammad, Amir of Kabul: his discovery of Russia's intrigues, and the arrival of a Russian agent at Kabul, led to his advice, that Dost Muhammad, the reigning Amir, should be supported: but this advice was not accepted, the Amir's requests were rejected, and, by the second Afghan war, Shah Shuja was to be reinstated. Burnes was sent to Sind and Beluchistan, to prepare the way of the British Army: he was made, later, Political Agent at Kabul under the Envoy Sir W. H. Macnaghten: Shah Shuja was re-made Amir: Burnes was knighted, made Lt.-Colonel: and C.B.: for 2 years, at Kabul, he had a subordinate position: the Afghan mob rose, not without warning, on Nov. 2, 1841, and Burnes was assassinated. It came to light, in 1861, that some of Burnes' despatches from Kabul, in 1839, had been altered, so as to convey opinions opposite to his. The matter was brought before Parliament, on an application for an inquiry: but Lord Palmerston's Government resisted the motion, which was defeated on the ground of the interval of time that had passed since the occurrence.

Commission, 1902-3: retired in 1903: C.S.I. in 1903: Knight Bachelor in 1904.

CANNING, CHARLES JOHN, EARL

Governor-General and first Viceroy: third son of George Canning the statesman: born Dec. 14, 1812: educated at Putney, Eton, privately, and at Christ Church, Oxford: first class in classics and second class in mathematics: M.P. for Warwick in 1836: succeeded to his mother's peerage in 1837: Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, 1841-6, and Chief Commissioner for Woods and Forests: was a follower of Sir Robert Peel: Postmaster-General in Lord Aberdeen's and Lord Palmerston's Governments in 1853-5: Governor-General of India, Feb. 29, 1856: Viceroy from Nov. 1, 1858. In his first year of office he had to arrange for the war with Persia, in which Sir James Outram (q.v.) had the command. The events of the mutiny of 1857-8 constitute the history of India rather than the biography of Canning. Its causes originated before his time. He was not alone in failing at first to appreciate adequately the symptoms and the extent of the outbreak: but, on grasping its character, he rose to the occasion. He detained troops on their way to China, and expedited the dispatch of reinforcements to the affected districts of Upper India. He showed calmness, courage, judgment, firmness, foresight, and acquired the name of "Clemency Canning" for his moderation in punishment, and his repression of vindictiveness. He became unpopular on account of this policy. He trusted his chief officers, Sir Henry, and Sir John, Lawrence, his commanders in the field, his immediate advisers and others: but preserved his own right to decide, when he disagreed with them. For a time he assumed personally the government of the N.W.P. By his Oudh proclamation he confiscated, with exceptions, the land of that province. This led to the controversy which ended in the resignation of Lord Ellenborough, the President of the Board of Control. He carried out the transfer on Nov. 1, 1858, of the Government of India from the E. I. Co. to the Crown: and was made an Earl. In 1859-60 and 1860-1 he made prolonged tours in Upper India. He had to deal with all the troubles resulting from the mutiny, the reorganization of the finances and of the Army required for India: the reforms in the Indian Councils, the development of education, the question of the income-tax, the grant of adoption sunnuds to native chiefs, with the famine of 1860-1 in the N.W.P. The death of Lady Canning from fever, in Nov. 1861, was universally deplored. He left India on March 18, 1862, in bad health: died June 17, 1862, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. He had been made K.G. for his services in India.

CANNING, CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH, COUNTESS (1817-1861)

Daughter of Lord Stuart de Rothesay: born March 31, 1817, married, Sep. 5, 1835, in London to the Hon. Charles John Canning, afterwards Earl Canning, (q.v.), first Viceroy of India. She was constantly at Court as Lady-in-Waiting in attendance on Queen Victoria. Her death at Calcutta, Nov. 18, 1861, was deeply lamented. She returned to Calcutta on Nov. 8, after a month's visit to Darjeeling. She had caught jungle fever on her way down, when passing through the malarious country at the foot of the hills and in the Purnea district. She was buried in Barrackpur Park, on the banks of the Ganges. All accounts testify to her noble, simple and beautiful character, her talents and mental gifts, her personal appearance, her graciousness and dignity: in the trying time of the mutiny she rendered great help to her husband by her devotion, loyalty and self-sacrifice, by her calm and steady courage, her patience and self-possession, "no one was ever more admired and looked up to by every class of her Majesty's subjects." Lord Canning wrote this inscription for the monument over her grave: "Honours and praises written on a tomb are at best but vain-glory: but that her charity, humility, meekness and watchful faith in her Saviour will, for that Saviour's sake, be accepted of God and be to her a glory everlasting, is the firm trust of those who knew her best and most dearly loved her in life, and who cherish the memory of her, departed."

CANNING, GEORGE (1770-1827)

Son of George Canning: born April 11, 1770: educated at Eton and Christ Church, Oxford: M.P. for Newport, 1794: for Wendover, 1797: Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, 1796-9: Commissioner of the Board of Control (commonly called the India Board) 1799-1800: Foreign Secretary, 1807: fought a duel with Lord Castlereagh, Sep. 22, 1809: M.P. for Liverpool, 1812: President of the Board of Control, June 4, 1816, to Jan. 12, 1821: nominated Governor-General of India March, 1822, but, on Lord Castlereagh's death, Canning resigned that appointment and again became Foreign Secretary, 1822: M.P. for Harwich, 1822: Prime Minister, April, 1827, and Chancellor of the Exchequer: died Aug. 8, 1827: father of Earl Canning (q.v.), Viceroy and Governor-General, 1856-62.

CAPEL, HON. SIR THOMAS BLADEN
(1776-1853)

Son of fourth Earl of Essex: born Aug. 25, 1776: was in the Navy, 1791-1847, rising to be Admiral: served on various stations, and under Nelson at the Nile and Trafalgar: at the forcing of the Dardanelles, 1807: off N. America: K.C.B., 1832: and from 1834 to 1837 was Naval C. in C. in the E. Indies, in the Winchester, 50 guns: G.C.B., 1852: died March 4, 1853.

CAPON, SIR DAVID (1793-1869)

Co.'s military service, 1809: joined the Bombay N.I., 1810: in the Palampur expedition, 1813: in the Konkan, 1817: commanded troops at Aden, 1838: twice attacked by large bodies of Arabs: commanded a Brigade of the Bombay Army at the siege of Multan, 1848-9: in the subsequent pursuit of the Sikhs: K.C.B., 1862: General, 1868: died Dec. 17, 1869.

CAPPEL, SIR ALBERT JAMES LEPPON
(1836-)

Born 1836: served in the Crimea 1855-6: entered the Indian Telegraph Department, 1857, and was Director of Indian Telegraphs, 1883-9: K.C.I.E. in 1887.

CAPPER (? -1809)

Colonel in the Madras Army: influential in the affairs of Fort St. George in the latter part of the 18th century: on more than one occasion was employed by the Governors in civil and ecclesiastical negotiations: as, e.g. in 1787, in the time of Sir Archibald Campbell, when the Council had to settle important matters with regard to the Roman Catholic population of Madras, and French influence had to be excluded: saw active service and fought "with spirit and gallantry" at Arikeru, under Colonel Montresor, 1800: distinguished himself under Wellesley: became Lt-Colonel and Adjutant-General. When Sir George Barlow was Governor of Madras, Capper became implicated in the disputes between General Hay Macdowall, C. in C. of the Madras Army, and the Civil Authorities, 1809: Macdowall had resigned in Jan. and left for England: the responsibility of publishing his Army Order against Munro (which gave further offence to the Madras Government) rested with Colonel Capper, and his suspension was the result: he, too, started for England, but was lost at sea on the voyage, March, 1809.

CAREY, ARTHUR DOUGLAS (? -)

I.C.S.: educated at the City of London School: went out to Bombay, 1865: Collector of Salt Revenue, 1881: acting Commissioner of Inland Customs, 1881: in 1885 travelled, via Ladak to Northern Tibet, to Lake Mungtsa, Khotan, Kuchar, Lake Lob, Tsaidam, Urumtsi, Yarkand, to Ladak: Commissioner of Customs, Salt, Opium and Abkari, 1891: on special duty to Lisbon, in connexion with Goa Treaty negotiations, 1891-2: retired 1893.

CAREY, EUSTACE (1791-1855)

Missionary: son of Thomas Carey, a non-commissioned officer: nephew of the Rev. Dr. W. Carey (q.v.): born March 22, 1791: educated at Bristol College: arrived at Serampur as a missionary in 1814: founded a missionary establishment at Calcutta, 1817: left India, 1825: urged the cause of missions in England: wrote about missions and a memoir of W. Carey: died July 19, 1855.

CAREY, FELIX (1782-1822)

Missionary: son of the Rev. Dr. W. Carey (q.v.): went with his parents to India: assisted his father in his Biblical translations: besides many translations in Bengali, he published a Burmese grammar, and began a Burmese dictionary and Pali grammar: he died at Serampur, Nov. 10, 1822.

CAREY, MARY (1741-1801)

Of Indian birth: wife of Peter Carey, a seafaring man: the last of the 23 survivors of the 146 persons imprisoned in the Black Hole of Calcutta on June 20, 1756: her husband died there, or afterwards in the fighting at Fulta: her subsequent fate is uncertain, but the tradition of her being carried off by the Nawab's people is not authentic. She married again, her second husband being a military officer. She confirmed, at an interview on Aug. 13, 1799, Holwell's account of the Black Hole tragedy: she died March 28, 1801, at Calcutta.

CAREY, REV. DR. WILLIAM (1761-1834)

Missionary: born Aug. 17, 1761, in Northamptonshire: son of Edmund Carey, a village schoolmaster: apprenticed to a shoemaker at Hackleton: joined the congregation of Baptists in 1783, and at 22 was publicly baptized: studied Greek, Latin and Hebrew under great privations; had charge of a congregation at Leicester in 1789, and joined in forming a Baptist missionary society at Kettering, 1792: sent out as their first missionary to Bengal in 1794, lost all his property in the Hughli and was destitute in Calcutta. After cultivating in the Sundarbans, he became Superintendent of an indigo factory in the Malda district for 5 years, built a church there, and preached in the villages. Being prevented by the E. I. Co. from establishing a mission in British territory, he formed with others, in 1799, a missionary settlement at Serampur under the protection of the Danish Governor, Colonel Bie: there he first translated the Bible into Bengali and printed it, and it was afterwards translated into 26 languages. Carey also published dictionaries and many grammars of languages and other Indian works: edited the Ramayana and Roxburgh's Flora Medica. In 1801 he was appointed to be a Professor of Sanskrit, Bengali and Mahratti at the new College of Fort William, and in 1805 he founded the Bow Bazar Mission Chapel in Calcutta: in 1807 he was made D.D. by the Brown University in the United States. Notwithstanding official warnings against over-zeal his mission prospered, and many out-stations were established: he died at Serampur, June 9, 1834.

CARMICHAEL, DAVID FREMANTLE (1830-1903)

I.C.S.: son of D. D. Carmichael Smyth: he resumed the family name of Carmichael: educated at Harrow and Haileybury, 1849-50: went to Madras in the Civil Service, 1851: Private Secretary to Sir C. Trevelyan when Governor, 1859: Revenue Secretary to Government, 1875: Chief Secretary, 1877: Member of Council, 1878-83: died Sep. 30, 1903.

CARNAC, JOHN (1716-1800)

I. Co.'s service for his share in the convention of War-gaum, Jan. 14, 1779: died at Mangalore on a sea voyage, Nov. 9, 1800.

CARNATIC, AZIM-UD-DAULA, NAWAB OF THE (1775-1819)

Son of Amir-ul-umra: nephew of Umdat-ul-umra (q.v.), and grandson of Muhammad Ali (q.v.): born 1775: on the death of his uncle, Azim-ud-daula, accepted the British terms, which Ali Husain, the reputed son of Umdat, had refused, and was given the succession. An engagement was made with him on July 31, 1801, by which he gave up the government of the Carnatic to the E. I. Co., and allowances were assigned for his personal expenses and for his family: he lived quietly, and died Aug. 3, 1819.

CARNATIC, GHULAM MUHAMMAD GHANUS, LAST NAWAB OF THE (1824-1855)

CLIVE, ROBERT, BARON (1725-1774)

Governor of Bengal: son of Richard Clive: born Sep. 29, 1725: educated at Lostock, Market Drayton, Merchant Taylors' and Hemel Hempstead: his youth marked by energy, courage, and adventure: reached Madras as a "writer" in the E. I. Co.'s Civil Service in 1744: in the capitulation of Madras, 1746: escaped to Fort St. David: obtained military employ in 1848: at Boscawen's siege of Pondicherry: fought at Devikota, 1749, on behalf of the Tanjore ruler: at the flight at Valkonda: seized Arcot on Aug. 31, 1751, to divert Chanda Sahib from besieging Muhammad Ali at Trichinopoly: was himself besieged with his small party in the fort of Arcot for 50 days by Chanda Sahib's superior force, which he beat off successfully: one of the most brilliant feats in history: defeated Raja

Sahib and the French at Caveripak, 1752: destroyed the town of Duplex Fatchabad: defeated French Army near Trichinopoly: took Covelong and Chingleput: in England, 1753-6: returned to India as Lt.-Colonel: on his way out through Bombay captured, on Feb. 13, 1756, Gheria, the stronghold of the pirate Angria: became Lieutenant-Governor of Fort St. David, June 20, 1756: after the Black Hole tragedy, Clive was sent up to Bengal in Oct.-Dec. 1756: took Calcutta and Hughli from the Nawab Suraj-ud-daula: again defeated him and took Chandernagore: through Omichund, whom he deceived by the fraud of two copies, one of them being fictitious, of the treaty, made a treaty with Mir Jafar to desert the Nawab: fought the battle of Plassey, June 23, 1757: routed the Nawab, who fled and was killed: installed Mir Jafar as Nawab, and received large sums from him: made Governor of Bengal: asserted himself against his colleagues in the Government: defeated the Dutch near Chinsura: sent Colonel Forde to the N. districts of Madras: to England again, 1760-5: made Baron Clive of Plassey in 1762: K.C.B. in 1764: M.P. for Shrewsbury: described as a "heaven-born General": quarrelled with Sullivan, Chairman of the E. I. Co.'s Directors, and defeated him: reappointed Governor of Bengal and C. in C. to reform the abuses prevailing there in his absence: held office May 3, 1765, till Jan. 1767: obtained from the Emperor of Delhi, Shah Alam, the "diwani," i.e. authority to administer the Civil Government and collect the revenue, of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, Aug. 12, 1765: restored Oudh to Shuja-ud-daula: reformed the administration, checking malpractices and giving adequate salaries: measures of retrenchment provoked mutiny, which he promptly repressed: finally retired in 1767, poorer than in 1765: a £70,000 legacy from Mir Jafar he devoted to "the Clive Fund" for military men: attacked in England by numerous enemies, his administration subjected to Parliamentary inquiry: partly condemned, but it was finally decided that Clive had rendered great and meritorious services to his country: worn out by ill-health and persecution, he took his own life, Nov. 22, 1774. His character much discussed: his bravery, ability, masterfulness, power of leading and governing are generally admitted: but his deceit of Omicund cannot be justified, and his acceptance of large presents from Mir Jafar can only be excused by special considerations of contemporary custom, and their openness.

In his early years, as Assistant Collector in Tirhut and Purnea, he took keenly to sport: his first literary work was on the Agriculture and Commerce of Bengal, in which he opposed the monopoly policy of the E. I. Co. At first he disliked Oriental literature, but feeling compelled, in the exercise of his duties, to learn law through the Sanskrit language, he published a translation of a Digest of Hindu Law, 1791, in which his appointment in 1795 to Mirzapur, near Benares, facilitated his Sanskrit studies: also wrote in the Asiatic Researches, his first paper, in 1794, being "On the Duties of a Faithful Hindu Widow": also, on the "Origin of Caste": was sent on a mission to the Raja of Berar at Nagpur in 1799-1801, without success: appointed in 1801 to be a Judge of the Sadr Diwani Adalat, and four years later became the Head of that Court: was also, unsalaried, Professor of Hindu Law and Sanskrit at the College of Fort William, Calcutta: was a Member of the Supreme Council from 1807 to 1812, retaining his seat in the Sadr Court: after his 5 years in Council, Colebrooke returned to the Court, and next became a Member of the Board of Revenue, till the close of 1814: was President of the Asiatic Society of Bengal from 1807 to 1814, when he left India. He made a voyage to the Cape on business in 1821-2: after his return thence, he became Director of the Royal Asiatic Society, which he helped to found in 1823: became totally blind, and died March 20, 1837. His literary and scientific labours were immense. A great mathematician, a zealous astronomer and profound Sanskrit scholar, his writings always commanded the highest attention: he has been described as facile princeps among Sanskrit scholars. He wrote also on the Vedas, on Sanskrit grammar, and a lexicon, on the Sect of Jains, on Indian Jurisprudence and Roman law, besides other papers on Hindu Law, philosophy and customs, Indian algebra, on astronomy, the height of the Himalayas, botany, geology, comparative philology, etc., in contributions to the Transactions of the learned Societies—the Astronomical, Linnaean, Geological and Asiatic—to which he belonged, as well as to the Royal Societies of London and Edinburgh: he was a Member of several foreign Academies

He was Resident in Nipal, 1845, Commissioner of Tenasserim, 1846: Judge of the Sadr Court at Calcutta: Lieutenant-Governor of the N.W.P. from Nov. 7, 1853. It was said that Colvin "over-governed": he worked with extraordinary industry, and greatly increased the business of the Government: his action in the mutiny has been the subject of controversy: he issued, in May, a proclamation which was not entirely approved: the violence of the outbreak fell upon him without warning, and the forces at his disposal were inadequate to meet it. He was "worn out by the unceasing anxieties and labours of his charge"—so ran Lord Canning's notification of his death: he fell ill, became worse, and died in cantonments on Sep. 9, 1857: and was buried in the fort at Agra. Sir Auckland Colvin, in his life of his father, J. R. Colvin, in the "Rulers of India" series, has exhausted the subject.

Born Sep. 15, 1845: educated at Sir Jamsetji Jijibhai's Institution and the Elphinstone College, Bombay: headmaster of the Fort High School, Bombay, for nearly 20 years: the pioneer of higher education by private non-missionary enterprise in Western India. Sir W. W. Hunter, President of the Education Commission of 1882, stated that had there been others like Cooper in the chief centres of India, the Commission would never have been appointed, because his work had solved the problem of the Commission: the first Parsi schoolmaster to visit England, 1875, to study the educational systems of the West and apply them to his work in India. He was a household word among Bombay students: was popularly known as Manackji Master: his High School officially bore the highest reputation: he edited Pope's Homer's Iliad: died Aug. 4, 1904.

COOPER, THOMAS THORNVILLE
(1839-1878)

Traveller: son of John J. Cooper: born Sep. 13, 1839: educated at Bishopwearmouth. When he was on a voyage to Australia for his health, the crew mutinied: he went to India, 1859: joined the firm of Arbuthnot & Co. at Madras: travelled to Rangoon and on to Shanghai: fought against the Taiping rebels: in 1868, he tried to travel from Hankow, through Tibet, to India, was stopped at Batang and near Weisi and imprisoned, and, via the Yangtze, reached Hankow in Nov. 1868: in 1869, trying to reach China from Sadiya in Assam was stopped at Prun. The India Office employed him with the Panthay mission to London: he was then made Political Agent at Bhamo: returned home for his health: attached to the India Office: reappointed in 1876 to Bhamo, and was murdered there by one of his own guards, April 24, 1878. He wrote Travels of a Pioneer of Commerce in Pigtail and Petticoats, 1871: and Mishmee Hills, 1873.

COOTE, SIR EYRE (1720-1783)

Born in 1726: fourth son of the Rev. Dr. Chidley Coote: entered the Army in 1745: went to India in 1754 with the 39th regt. and became Captain on June 18, 1755. Part of this regiment was included in the force despatched from Madras to Bengal in 1756 against the Nawab Surajuddaula, after his capture of Calcutta. Coote was present at its recapture, at the taking of Chander-nagore, and at the victory of Plassey, on June 23, 1757: Clive, it is said, acted on his advice among others to give immediate battle. In Jan. 1759, he was gazetted Lt-Colonel of the 84th regt., and to command the troops in Madras. In the war with the French, under Lally, he took Wandiwash, Nov. 30, 1759, and the fort of Carangooly, relieved Trichinopoly, defeated the French at Wandiwash, Jan. 22, 1760, and took Arcot. He besieged Lally in Pondicherry, while a naval force attacked it by sea. On its surrender in Jan., 1761, the French power in India completely collapsed: Coote returned to England in 1762, and was received with honour: became a Colonel on April 4, 1765, and M.P. for Leicester. In 1769 he was reappointed to command the troops in Madras, but resigned and returned to England in Oct. 1770, where he was made K.B. Aug. 31, 1771: Maj-General Sep. 29, 1775: Lt-General on Aug. 29, 1777: and Commander-in-Chief in India, on April 17, 1777. He succeeded General Clavering as Member of the Supreme Council at Calcutta on March 24, 1779. When Hyder Ali of Mysore declared war, invaded the Carnatic in 1780 and defeated Colonel Baillie at Perambakam, Warren Hastings despatched Coote to Madras, which he reached on Nov. 5, 1780. Early in 1781 Coote took the field against Hyder, raised the siege of Wandiwash, marched on Cuddalore, attacked Chelambakam and won a decided victory at Porto Novo, July 1, 1781, besides defeating Hyder at Perambakam, Aug. 27, effecting the relief of Vellore and the capture of Chittore. His last encounter with Hyder was the indecisive skirmish at Arnee, June 2, 1782. Coote's failing health compelled him to resign the command in Madras and take a change to Calcutta. Only partially recovered, he returned to Madras early in 1783, but on the voyage was chased by the French. The anxiety and exposure produced a relapse, which proved fatal on April 28, 1783, two days after his arrival at Madras. His body was taken to England and interred at Rockburne, in Hampshire. A monument in Westminster Abbey was erected to him by the East India Company. His military capacity has been highly praised, as also his patience, temper, activity and energy, valour and coolness. His enforcement of discipline was tempered by kindness, which endeared him to his soldiers.

DALHOUSIE, JAMES ANDREW
BROWN-RAMSAY, FIRST MAR-QUIS OF (1812-1860)

Governor-General: third son of the ninth Earl, C. in C. in India (q.v.): born April 22, 1812: educated at Harrow and Christ Church, Oxford: M.P. for Haddingtonshire, 1837: succeeded his father, March, 1838: Vice-President of the Board of Trade in Peel's administration, 1843: Privy Councillor, 1843: President of the Board and in the Cabinet, 1845: declined a seat in the Cabinet offered him in July,

1846, by Lord John Russell, who appointed him Governor-General of India in 1847: assumed office, Jan. 12, 1848. After the rebellion of Mulraj at Multan, the second Sikh war broke out: Dalhousie went up to the Panjab-Satlaj frontier and supervised the operations: annexed the Panjab in March, 1849: was made a Marquis: made Sir Henry Lawrence President of the Board of Administration, and, in 1853, made Sir John Lawrence Chief Commissioner of the Panjab: his controversy with Sir C. J. Napier, the C. in C., regarding certain new regulations affecting the grant to the Sepoys of compensation for dearth of provisions, led to the latter's resignation. Dalhousie's internal administration of the country was thorough and comprehensive: he introduced and laid down a system for the construction of railways: joined the provinces by telegraphs: organized the imperial postal system: created the Departments of Public works, Jails, Forests, Survey, and Education: dealt with the strength and composition of the Army in India: reorganized and expanded the Legislative Council: created a separate Lieutenant-Governorship of Lower Bengal (to relieve the Governor-General of his direct personal charge of that Province): he declared war on the King of Burma in 1852, and supervised it himself, visiting the country and annexing Pegu: made treaties with the Khan of Kelat and Amir of Afghanistan: the Berars were assigned for the payment of the Hyderabad debts. Dalhousie has been blamed for the annexation of Satara, Nagpur, Tanjore, Jhansi, Oudh, for reducing the title of the Nawab of the Carnatic to Prince of Arcot, for terminating the ex-Peshwa's pension the fact is, that where annexations were effected, according to the doctrine of lapse, i.e. on the failure of natural heirs, that policy was not Dalhousie's, but a policy which had been previously declared and acted upon and was, in each case, sanctioned by higher authority: in the case of Oudh, he personally was opposed to annexation, but his Council advocated it and the authorities in England ordered it, on account of the continued maladministration by the King, after repeated warnings: Dalhousie restricted the application of the doctrine of lapse to cases of Hindu dependent states. He was also blamed for weakening the European Army in India : in fact, he had protested against reduction of the English Army in India for the Crimean and Persian wars, and had given full attention to military affairs : he abolished numerous Boards and established responsible Departments in their places : his despatches were not attended to at the India House, and he was never able to defend himself and his administration. He suffered from ill-health, during the prolongation of his appointment in India, and was too ill after his retirement, on Feb. 29, 1856, to defend his policy : and the English Governments failed to support him. Thus the outbreak of the mutiny was unjustly attributed to his alleged policy in respect of annexation, neglect of military matters, and the reduced strength of the English Army in India. His assailants have been amply refuted by his later biographers, especially in Sir W. Lee Warner's Life of the Marquis of Dalhousie, 1904. The death, from exhaustion after sea-sickness, of Lady Dalhousie in 1853, in sight of England, affected him deeply. Always a very hard worker, he sought distraction in "work, work," and in his public duties. His final minute of Feb. 28, 1856, contains a summary of his administration. He was masterful in character and impatient of opposition. "In the three words, conquest, consolidation and development, his work may be summed up" (Sir W. W. Hunter). He stands out as "the great Proconsul" of modern times. After retirement he held no office but that of Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, 1852-60. He died Dec. 19, 1860. His statue is in Calcutta, where the Dalhousie Institute was erected in his memory.

DAUD SHAH (? -1897)

Of the Lahkan Kheyl, a branch of a tribe of the Ghilzais: at the age of 20 he joined the Army of Amir Dost Muhammad Khan and became Akbar Khan's orderly officer. Shir Ali made him captain for services rendered at the battle of Kajhbaz on June 6, 1865, in which Sirdar Muhammad Ali Khan, eldest son of Shir Ali, was killed. Daud Shah showed great bravery during a campaign at Khost and was raised to the rank of General: he defeated Abdur Rahman's forces in Turkistan, and settled the country in Shir Ali's name, but, having quarrelled with General Muhammad Alam, he was recalled to Kabul and imprisoned by Shir Ali. Soon released, he acted as Commander-in-Chief when Yakub Khan rebelled against his father Shir Ali, and when General Faramurz Khan, commanding the Amir's forces, was killed by Aslam Khan, son of Amir Dost Muhammad. Upon Yakub's second rebellion, an army was sent to Herat in which Daud Shah was given a command, but Shir Ali, finding no General at Kabul, recalled him and entrusted him with all army affairs at the capital. In Jan. 1879, when Shir Ali fled to Turkistan, after the capture of Ali Masjid and the Peiwar Kotal by the British troops, Daud Shah was left at Kabul with Yakub Khan and accompanied him to meet Sir S. Browne at Gandamak. He was Yakub's Commander-in-Chief at the time of the massacre of Sir Louis Cavagnari in Sep. 1879, and Yakub's flight to the British camp. During Sir F. Gwalior campaign, at Punnar, 1843: in the Satlaj and Panjab campaigns, 1845-6 and 1848-9: at Sobraon, Ramnagar, Chilianwala, Gujarat: at the siege of Delhi in the mutiny: in the actions at Bulandshahr, Alighar, Agra: at the relief of Lucknow: Brevets of Major and Lt-Colonel: C.B.: Lt-General, 1881: K.C.B., 1893: died Aug. 7, 1900.

DUBOIS, JEAN A. (1765-1848)

Abbè: ordained at 27 in the diocese of Viviers, in 1792: escaped from the massacres of the French Revolution, and, the same year, leaving France for mission work under the Missions Étrangères, was first attached to the Pondicherry mission: after Seringapatam, 1799, he was invited to visit it, to reconvert the forced perverts to Islam. He was 31 years in India, living entirely among the people from 17 to 18 years, chiefly in Mysore, where he established, at Sathalli, an agricultural settlement of reconverted Christians. His Description of the Character, Manners and Customs of the People of India, and of their Institutions, Religious and Civil, was stated to be "the most correct, comprehensive and minute account extant in any European language of the Hindus" of S. India: the Madras Government bought the MSS. from him in 1806 for 2,000 pagodas: this was translated in London in 1816, and was for long the only published edition: meanwhile, in 1815, the Abbè had revised and amplified his work, but this was not published until 1897. On returning to France in June, 1823, with a pension from the E.I. Co., he published Letters on the State of Christianity in India, containing his conviction that the conversion of the Hindus was impossible. He became a Director, and, from 1836 to 1839, Superior of the Missions Étrangères at Paris, where he died Feb. 17, 1848.

DUFF, REV. DR. ALEXANDER (1806-1878)

Missionary: son of James Duff: born on April 25, 1806: educated at Moulin, Kirkmichael, Perth, St. Andrew's University, under Dr. Chalmers: invited by the Committee of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland on Foreign Missions to become their first missionary to India: he was ordained in 1829 and went out to Calcutta in 1829-30: he was twice shipwrecked on the voyage, near the Cape and off Sagar island: lost his library: at Calcutta he declared his policy, to afford, in the English language, education inseparably combined with the Christian faith as its animating spirit: the Duff College was soon founded, and, proving very successful, attracted a very large number of pupils, not without troubles on account of conversions. He received much help from Sir C. Trevelyan (q.v.) and from the decision of Government of March 7, 1835, in favour of the promotion of European science and literature through English rather than the Oriental languages. During his visit home, 1834-40, for his health, he made speeches, collected money, and laboured hard in organizing his mission: he was D.D. of Aberdeen in 1835. He was in India again from 1840 to 1850, and from 1856 to 1863: made extensive tours in the cause of missions: was opposed to the Government policy in the mutiny: assisted greatly in the establishment of the Calcutta University in 1857, the shape it assumed, its educational measures and examinations. When away from India, he was made Moderator of the General Assembly of the Free Church in 1851: he travelled in the United States in 1854, and made constant speeches, and was made LL.D., New York: he inspired the Government Education Despatch to India of 1854. On his finally leaving Calcutta, memorials were erected to him. He travelled in South Africa in 1864. In 1867 he became the first Professor of Evangelistic Theology at the Free Church College, Edinburgh. He was again Moderator of the General Assembly in 1873. He wrote on India and Indian Missions, and edited the Calcutta Review, 1845-9, writing articles in it, besides other publications chiefly connected with his mission work: died Feb. 12, 1878.

DUFFERIN AND AVA, FREDERICK

DUNCAN, JONATHAN (1756-1811)

Governor: Indian Civilian: son of Alexander Duncan: born May 15, 1756: arrived at Calcutta in the E.I. Co.'s service in 1772: made Resident and Superintendent at Benares, 1788: suppressed scandals in the administration and infanticide: was Governor of Bombay for the unprecedented time of 16 years from Dec. 27, 1795, to Aug. 11, 1811, dying at Bombay: he recognized a very large number of small chiefs as sovereign princes, a policy which was not elsewhere adopted: his time was synchronous with the later war against Tipoo, the Mahratta wars, and Baird's expedition to Egypt, the pacification of Gujarat and Kattiawar, in all of which he played a great part. He was buried at Bombay, and a monument was erected in his honour, with the inscription "He was a good man and a just," and a scroll bearing the words "Infanticide abolished in Benares and Kattiawar."

DUNDAS, JAMES (1842-1879)

Son of George Dundas, Scotch judge: born Sep. 12, 1842: educated at the Edinburgh Academy and Addiscombe: went to India in the Royal Engineers, March, 1862: became a Captain: gained his V.C. in the Bhutan expedition of 1864-5 for personal bravery in storming, under very trying conditions, a block-house, defended by 200 desperate men: in the Afghan war of 1878-80, he and another officer were killed by an accident on the occasion of the blowing up of a fort near Kabul on Dec. 23, 1879: he was an officer of high professional merit and promise.

DUPLEIX, MARQUIS JOSEPH FRAN- CIS (1697-1764)

Son of a French farmer-general, Director of the Company of the Indies: born Jan. 1697: sent to sea: made several voyages to America and India: made First Councillor and Military Commissioner of the Superior Council at Pondicherry in 1720: accumulated a fortune: made Intendant, or Superintendent, of the factory at Chandernagore, 1730: developed its coasting trade: Governor of Pondicherry, 1741, and Director-General of the French factories in India: declared himself Nawab of the Mogul Empire and Commander of 4,500 Horse: when war with England broke out, 1744, he sought help from Anwaruddin, the Nawab of the Carnatic: La Bourdonnais came to his aid, from the Isle of France, and took Madras, Sep. 21, 1746: great jealousy between him and Dupleix, who refused to surrender Madras and defeated the Nawab's force at St. Thomé: Dupleix violated the treaty with the English, by retaining Madras, and by his treatment of them: his attack on Fort St. David failed, 1748: the English attack under Boscawen by land and sea on Pondicherry was unsuccessful: Madras was restored to the English in 1749, after the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle. In the contests in Southern India, Dupleix, striving to found French ascendancy there, took the side of Muzaffar Jang and Salabat Jang successively against Nasir Jang for the Subadarship of the Dekkan, and of Chanda Sahib against Anwaruddin and Muhammad Ali successively for the Nawabship of the Carnatic. By 1751, Dupleix's policy was, after a struggle, for a time successful. Muhammad Ali, at Trichinopoly, applied to the English for help. Stringer, Lawrence and Clive, going to his aid, defeated the French, Dupleix being badly served by his generals. He acquired the Northern Sircars from the Nizam and, after Chanda's death, claimed to be, and was nominated, Nawab of the Carnatic: was made a Marquis, 1752: his forces met with further reverses from the English: the French Ministers and Company of the Indies objected to his schemes and fighting, as being obstructive to trade, and ruinously expensive: they insisted on peace, and recalled Dupleix, who was superseded by Godeheu, 1754, ruined by him and left India, Oct. 14, 1754: his claims, for private money expended, disregarded and unsatisfied: his services ignored: he died in comparative poverty in France, Nov. 10, 1764: the greatest Frenchman in India: the first to see how Europeans might rule in India and employ native troops: ambitious, prescient, full of resource, will, and genius: had great knowledge of native character: inferior in the field of action, and not a soldier: he failed for want of support from France: his statue was erected at Pondicherry in 1870.

EDEN, THE HON. SIR ASHLEY

(1831-1887)

Indian Civil Service: third son of the third Lord Auckland, Bishop of Bath and Wells, and nephew of the Governor-General Lord Auckland: born on Nov. 13, 1831: educated at Rugby, Winchester, and Haileybury: arrived in India in 1852: distinguished himself in the Sonthal insurrection, 1855: Secretary to the Bengal Government from 1862-71, and in the Bengal Legislative Council: employed to make a treaty with the Raja of Sikkim in 1861, and as envoy to Bhutan in 1863-4, where he was subjected to gross indignities, and compelled to sign a treaty which the British Government repudiated and declared war on Bhutan. Eden was Chief Commissioner of British Burma, 1871-7, acting, in 1875, as Member of the Supreme Council. He was Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, 1877 to 1882, and President of the Army Commission for some months in 1879. In Bengal he exhibited such capacity, and attained such success! in his administration, that his retirement was universally deplored, and a statue erected in his honour in Calcutta. He was in the Council of India from 1882 till his death on July 8, 1887. He was made C.S.I. in 1874, and K.C.S.I. in 1878. Though last in his term at Haileybury, he was one of the ablest officers of modern times: his common sense and penetration were combined with fearlessness and force in the statement of his views.

Co.: died May 4, 1841.

EDWARDES, SIR HERBERT BENJAMIN (1819-1868)

Maj-General: son of the Rev. B. Edwardes: born Nov. 12, 1819: educated at Richmond and King's College, London, where he distinguished himself in the debating society: obtained an Indian cadetship from Sir R. Jenkins (q.v.): reached India in 1841: sent to the Panjab. Early in his career he published "Brahmini Bull's Letters in India to his cousin John Bull in England" in the Delhi Gazette, criticising the military and political system. He was A.D.C. to Sir Hugh Gough at Mudki and Sobraon in 1845-6: after which Sir Henry Lawrence, Resident at Lahore, took him as an Assistant. Edwardes, in 1847, pacified the district of Bannu, levelled 400 forts, and initiated civilization. On the murder of Vans Agnew and Anderson at Multan and the rebellion of Mulraj in April, 1848, Edwardes collected a force of tribesmen and, with the aid of the Nawab of Bahawalpur, and Colonel Van Cortlandt of the Sikh service, attacked Mulraj and the rebels, defeating them at Kineyri and Sadusain, maintaining the war for months until General Whish arrived and took Multan. He was made Brevet-Major and C.B.: received the thanks of Parliament and a special gold medal from the Court of Directors: D.C.L. of Oxford: after holding charge of the Jalaudhar and Hazara districts, he was in 1853 made Commissioner of Peshawar. He proposed to Government to make a treaty with Dost Muhammad, the Amir of Afghanistan: with Lord Dalhousie's approval, but after some doubts on Sir John Lawrence's part, treaties were made with the Amir in March, 1855, and 1857, really the work of Edwardes. The Amir and the Afghans remained quiet during the mutiny of 1857. On its outbreak, Edwardes suggested the formation of a movable column for the Panjab: he was told by Lord Canning to "hold on to Peshawar." He zealously, at this time and after, advocated the adoption of a more Christianizing policy in the government of India. While on furlough he was made K.C.B. in 1860: LL.D. of Cambridge: Commissioner of Umbala, 1862-5: and then left India for his health: K.C.S.I. in 1866: he took much interest in mission work in his retirement, and wrote part of the life of Sir Henry Lawrence: died Dec. 23, 1868: a memorial was erected to him in Westminster Abbey. He wrote also A Year on the Panjab Frontier in 1848-9. He has been described as one of the most remarkable men that the Indian Army has ever produced. His bravery and brilliancy were universally recognized. Sir John Lawrence wrote of him as a "born ruler of men."

ELERS, GEORGE (1777-1842)

Partly of German parentage: obtained a commission in the 12th regt.: arrived in Madras, 1797: served against Tippoo, but was ill at Vellore during the siege of Seringapatam: accompanied Col. Wellesley to Coorg and stayed with him at Seringapatam as his guest for three months. His Memoirs were edited from the original MS. by Lord Monson and George Leveson-Gower and published in 1903.

ELGIN AND KINCARDINE, JAMES

BRUCE, EIGHTH EARL OF

(Twelfth Earl of Kincardine): born July 20, 1811: educated at Eton and Christ Church, Oxford: Fellow of Merton College, 1832: M.P. for Southampton, 1841: succeeded his father in 1841: was made Governor of Jamaica, 1842, and, in 1846, Governor-General of Canada—an appointment fraught with difficulties—which he retained till 1854: for his services he was raised to the English peerage. In 1857 he was sent to China as special envoy: on his way there, he, at Lord Canning's request, diverted to India, troops intended for China, which were urgently required for the suppression of the Indian mutiny. He made the Tientsin Treaty with China, securing several important objects. In 1859 he became Postmaster-General in Lord Palmerston's Government. In 1860 he was again sent to China to obtain the ratification of the Tientsin treaty, which had not been carried out. He destroyed the Summer Palace, as a punishment for Chinese treachery and the murder of Englishmen. In Jan., 1862, he went to India as Viceroy, arriving at Calcutta in March. After spending the summer at Simla in 1863, he proceeded on tour in Upper India. He died of heart complaint, brought on by over-exertion, at Dharmasala on Nov. 20, 1863, and was there buried.

ELIOTT-LOCKHART, PERCY CLARE
(1867-)

Born Sep. 21, 1867: son of Col. W. Elliott-Lockhart, R.A.: educated at Bath: joined 1st West India regt., 1887, and Indian Staff Corps, 1890: served in Waziristan expedition, 1894-5: Chitral, 1895: N.W. frontier, 1897-8, defence of Malakand, operations in Bajaur, Mohmand and Buner: D.S.O.: author of A Frontier Campaign: Captain in Queen's Own Corps of Guides.

ELLENBOROUGH, EDWARD LAW,
FIRST EARL OF (1790-1871)

Governor-General: son of Edward, Baron Ellenborough, Lord Chief Justice of England: born Sep. 8, 1790: educated at Eton and St. John's College, Cambridge: M.P. for St. Michael's, Cornwall, 1813: was Lord Privy Seal, 1828: President of the Board of Control, from 1828 to 1830, from Dec., 1834 to April, 1835, and for a third time in Sep.-Oct., 1841. He, in 1832, sent Alexander Burnes (q.v.) to Lahore, and on to Central Asia: was for a forward policy and for the transfer of the Government of India to the Crown. In Oct., 1841, he was nominated to be Governor-General, and held the appointment from Feb. 28, 1842, to June 15, 1844. He desired a peace policy, but was never free of war. He pushed on the Chinese war and brought it to a conclusion successfully. He desired to withdraw from interference with Afghanistan, after rescuing the Kabul captives and restoring British prestige, and eventually sanctioned Sir W. Nott's withdrawal from Kandahar via Ghazni, Kabul and Peshawar. Pollock's Army of retribution forced its way through the Khyber to Kabul, and Afghanistan was evacuated in Oct.-Nov., 1842. Ellenborough's bombastic proclamation, on the recovery of the gates of Sonmuth from Ghazni, exposed him to ridicule. The troops retiring from Kabul were received at Ferozpur with exaggerated pomp. He annexed Sind, by means of Sir Charles Napier's victories, in 1842, though the justification for this act has been seriously questioned. He interfered in the affairs of the Gwalior State, where the Army had rebelled and expelled the regent Mama Sahib: he was present at the battle of Maharajpur, Dec. 28, 1843: a fresh treaty was made with the State. Being disrespectful and out of control, he was recalled by the Court of Directors in June, 1844, against the views of the Cabinet: was created an Earl: in 1846 he was made First Lord of the Admiralty, and in 1858, Feb. to June, was again President of the Board of Control. In this capacity, he addressed a despatch to Lord Canning regarding the latter's Oudh proclamation, which the Cabinet disavowed, and Ellenborough had to resign his office. During his Indian career, he preferred the military to political officers, and was unpopular with the civilians. His ability and eloquence were brilliant, but his other qualities detracted from his practical usefulness in high office. He died Dec. 22, 1871.

ELLES, SIR EDMUND ROCHE

ELPHINSTONE, JOHN, THIRTEENTH BARON (1807-1860)

Governor: and Lt-General: son of John, twelfth Lord Elphinstone: born June 23, 1807: succeeded his father in 1813: entered the Royal Horse Guards in 1826: was a Lord-in-waiting, 1835-7: G.C.H. in 1836: Governor of Madras from March 1837, to Sep. 1842, during an uneventful period: encouraged the practice of resorting to the Nilgiri hills for the hot weather: travelled in Kashmir and Upper India: returned to England in 1845: Lord-in-waiting again: Governor of Bombay, Dec. 1853, to May, 1860, during the mutiny, in which he showed his capacity for administration, suppressing all risings and annihilating a conspiracy in Bombay. He afforded great assistance to the Government of India by sparing troops from Bombay for the disaffected parts of the country: G.C.B. in 1858: raised to the Peerage of the United Kingdom, 1859: died July 19, 1860.

ELPHINSTONE, MOUNTSTUART

Governor: I.C.S.: son of John, eleventh Baron Elphinstone: born Oct. 6, 1779: educated at the High School, Edinburgh, and at Kensington: went out to Bengal as a "writer" in the E.I. Co.'s service in 1795: stationed at Benares, he had to ride for his life when European officers, including Cherry, the Agent to the Governor-General, were massacred there in Jan. 1799, by order of Wazir Ali, the Ex-Nawab of Oudh. In 1801 he was appointed Assistant to Sir Barry Close, the Resident at the court of Baji Rao, the Peshwa at Poona: at the battles of Assaye and Argaum, he was on the Staff of Colonel Arthur Wellesley, who told him that he ought to have been a soldier. He was Resident at Nagpur from 1804 to 1808: was sent as Envoy to Kabul, with a view to establish English influence there against the supposed French designs on India: Shah Shuja received him at Peshawar on March 5, 1809: the negotiations produced little result, as Shah Shuja was himself ejected from Afghanistan in 1809. Elphinstone was appointed Resident at Poona in 1811. In 1815 he insisted on the surrender of Trimbakji Danglia, the Peshwa's minister, for the murder of Gungadhar Sastri, the minister and envoy of the Gaekwar of Baroda, at Poona. In 1817 Elphinstone concluded the treaty dated June 13, of Poona, as dictated to the Peshwa, who, however, continued to intrigue. Elphinstone was, for a time, superseded by Sir T. Hislop, the General commanding the Army collected against the Pindaris: the Peshwa eventually attacked the British force at Kirki on Nov. 5, 1817, and was defeated: Elphinstone's residence at Poona, library, and papers were all burnt: he himself showed great skill and military courage: he annexed the Peshwa's territory, as ordered, and administered it, interfering as little as possible with native usages. He was Governor of Bombay from Nov. 1819, to Nov. 1827: instituted legislative and judicial reforms, had a code of Regulations drawn up, and advanced popular education. The Elphinstone College was founded in his honour. He travelled in Europe, 1827-9, and led a retired life: twice refused the offer of the Governor-Generalship of India, and declined the Under Secretaryship of the Board of Control and a special mission to Canada. He wrote An Account of the Kingdom of Caubul and its Dependencies in Persia, Tartary and India, 1815: his History of India, 1841, for which he was called the Tacitus of modern historians: and The Rise of British Power in the East, edited in 1887 by Sir E. Colebrooke. He was not ambitious, occupied his time with study, and maintained his interest in Indian affairs, being regarded as the Nestor of Indian statesmanship. He was a Vice-President of the Royal Asiatic Society. He combined through life a keenness for field sports with his love of books and the despatch of public business. Bishop Heber wrote of him, "Of Mr. Elphinstone everybody spoke highly": no Indian civilian has gained a greater name as a statesman and a ruler. He died Nov. 20, 1859: a statue was erected in St. Paul's Cathedral in his honour.

ELPHINSTONE, WILLIAM GEORGE KEITH (1782-1842)

Maj-General: son of Hon. William Fullerton Elphinstone, Director of the E.I. Bligh and at the capture of Cherbourg in 1758 : Secretary to Lord Kinnoull's Embassy at Lisbon, 1760 : amanuensis to Pitt, 1761-2 : clerk at the War Office, 1762 : resigned in March, 1772, for some unexplained reason. During those years, "Junius' letters" appeared, which for many grounds have been attributed to Francis. Their identity, first suggested by Taylor in 1813, 1816, may be considered to have been established. After the passing of the Regulating Act of 1773 for India, Francis was appointed a member of the new Supreme Council in India. He and his colleagues, Clavering and Monson, arrived at Calcutta on Oct. 19, 1774: these three opposed Warren Hastings, the Governor-General, and Barwell (q.v.), the remaining Member of the Supreme Council: being a majority, they had great power. Francis took the side of Nuncomar (q.v.), after the latter had accused Hastings of corruption. Nuncomar was hanged for forgery on Aug. 5, 1775. The death of Monson, on Sep. 25, 1776, gave Hastings the casting vote. Barwell left India in March, 1780: Francis resumed his opposition to Hastings, who wrote a minute accusing Francis of faithlessness and breach of trust and honour. Francis challenged him, and a duel took place on Aug. 17, 1780, in which Francis was badly wounded. He left India in Dec. 1780. In 1778 Francis was defendant in a crim. con. charge brought against him by G. F. Grand of the Indian Civil Service. Francis was sentenced by Impey to pay 50,000 rupees damages. He retired with a large fortune, but was very coldly received in England, except at Court. He became M.P. for Yarmouth, 1784: assisted Burke in preparing the charges against Hastings, but was not accepted as a manager of the impeachment. M.P. for Bletchingley, 1790; for Appleby, 1802: K.C.B. in Oct. 1806: made an elaborate speech on India in April, 1805: he hoped to be Governor-General of India, but failed to obtain it from Fox, with whom he quarrelled: he died Dec. 22, 1818. It is said that he made many anonymous contributions to the Press: his capacity, industry, courage, and certain good principles in his character have to be set against his malignity, vindictiveness, and unscrupulous conduct: his life and career have been minutely investigated.

FRANCKLIN, WILLIAM (1763-1839)

GILL, ROBERT (? -1875)

Major: antiquary, artist and sportsman: entered the Indian Army in 1842: his regimental service was apparently uneventful: he is remembered for his work, as follows. In 1844, the Court of Directors of the E.I. Co. ordered that copies should be made of the frescoes in the Buddhist excavations at Ajanta: Gill was appointed about 1844-6 to the work, and spent the remainder of his life, about thirty years, at Ajanta, doing it: living in the sarai in which Colonel (Sir) Arthur Wellesley (q.v.) had quarters after Assaye. With great labour, Gill, working in feverish jungle, and in dark recesses (haunted by wild animals), copied in full size and oils the principal frescoes, about thirty in number, and sent them to England, about 1855. Of these paintings, twenty-five, exhibited at the Crystal Palace, were burnt in 1866: five at the India office escaped: some of those burnt had been copied by George Scharf to illustrate the works of Mrs. Manning. The Ajanta frescoes were again copied, under Government orders, in 1872-85 by Mr. John Griffiths, Principal of the Bombay School of Art: and the results were published, 1896. Other drawings by Gill, i.e., of ground plans of the caves, and architectural details, are still preserved: he was also an expert photographer, as shown in his two books, viz. The Rock-cut Temples of India, illustrated by his 74 photographs, 1864: and One Hundred Stereoscopic Illustrations of Architecture and Natural History in W. India, 1864, both books with descriptions by J. Fergusson (q.v.). GRANT, CHARLES (1746-1823)

Born April 16, 1746, the date of the battle of Culloden, at which his father, Alexander, was severely wounded: educated at Elgin: apprenticed at Cromarty, 1758, and a clerk in London, 1763-67: went to India in 1767: attended to the private trade of Richard Becher, the Resident at Murshidabad: worked hard in the terrible Bengal famine of 1770: suffered from fever: returned to Scotland, 1771-2: and went out again as a "writer" to Bengal, in 1772-3: became a "factor," and then Secretary to the Board of Trade at Calcutta: in 1781 commercial resident at Malda, in charge of the silk filature: the post was very lucrative: Grant had his accounts examined by Cornwallis, who expressed a wish that all the Company's servants were equally scrupulous: in 1787 he was made Fourth Member of the Board of Trade, with the superintendence of all the Company's trade in Bengal. He supported mission work in Bengal. When the mission church (J. Z. Kier-nander's) in Calcutta was attacked by the Sheriff, Grant paid down 10,000 rupees to save it, and assigned it to the Church Missionary Society. He retired in 1790. He wrote, in 1792, his Observations on the State of Society among the Asiatic Subjects of Great Britain, advocating the cause of missions and education: it was printed for Parliament in 1813: he wrote the despatch from England on the Permanent Settlement of 1793: he became M.P. for Inverness in 1802, and for the county from 1804-18: he was Chairman of the Court of Directors in 1805, 1809, and 1815, and in Parliament took a leading part in all discussions on the E.I. Co.'s affairs, such as the renewal of the Charter in 1813, the China trade, missions, the Press, etc.: he opposed the Marquess Wellesley's warlike policy, and supported in 1808 the motion for his impeachment. In the new Charter he obtained an annual grant for education in India, the appointment of Bishops in India, and greater freedom for missionary work. He promoted the establishment of the E.I. Co.'s College at Hertford Castle in 1806, moved to Haileybury in 1809. He was a prominent member of the Clapham sect and of the religious Societies, and had much influence in the selection of missionary chaplains for India. He was Chairman of the Commissioners for the issue of Exchequer Bills, and served on the Commission for the building of churches. He retired from Parliament in 1818, and died on Oct. 31, 1823: the E.I. Co. placed a memorial of him in St. George's Church, Bloomsbury. No one, at the time of Charles Grant, laboured harder to raise the moral condition of India, its inhabitants and officials, or had greater influence in the settlement of Indian affairs than he had, as Director of the E.I. Co. and as M.P.: he had remarkable moral courage, a masterful hand, a determined will, and a hot temper under control.

GWALIOR, DAULAT RAO SINDIA, MAHARAJA OF (1780-1827)

Succeeded his great uncle and adoptive father Madhava (Madhoji) Sindia (q.v.), in 1794 : he organized a formidable army under French officers, plundered Poona, seized Ahmadnagar : declined an alliance with the British against an Afghan invasion : was defeated at Poona in 1802 by Jaswant Rao Holkar. In 1803 he was allied with the Raja of Berar to defeat the objects of the Treaty of Bassein : they were routed by General Arthur Wellesley at Assaye on Sep. 23, 1803, and at Argaum on Nov. 28, 1803 : he was forced to sign the Treaty of Sirji Anjengnam, Dec. 30, 1803, and cede territory : Lord Lake also defeated his forces at Alighar on Aug. 29, 1803, at Delhi and Agra, and at Laswari on Nov. 1 : he submitted in 1805 : Lord Cornwallis in 1805 restored Gohad and Gwalior to him. Daulat Rao continued to give trouble by the support he gave to the Pindaris and their depredations, and was compelled by Lord Hastings to make another treaty in 1817 : as he failed in his engagements, the fort of Asirghar was taken from him : he died March 21, 1827.

GWALIOR, SIR JIAJI RAO SINDIA, MAHARAJA OF (1835-1886)

His real name was Bagirat Rao : was adopted by his predecessor's (Jankoji) widow, Tara Bai : grave disturbances broke out regarding the regency : the Regent, Mama Sahib, the Maharaja's father-in-law, was driven out. Lord Ellenborough sent an army to Gwalior, to whom the usurper, Dada Khasgeewala, surrendered. The State Army was defeated at Maharajpur and Punniar on Dec. 29, 1843, and a treaty made at Gwalior in Jan. 1844, when Jiaji was placed on the throne. He paid great attention to military affairs and the improvement of his army. During the mutiny, the Maharaja remained loyal to the British, though the contingent force at Gwalior rebelled : from Tantia Topi and the Rani of Jhansi, he fled to Agra, but was re-established by Sir Hugh Rose at Gwalior : he was handsomely rewarded for his loyalty in the mutiny. Another treaty was made with him in 1864. The Fort at Gwalior was restored to him in 1885 and the British cantonment at Morar abandoned. He sat in 1875 as a member of the Court to try the then Gaekwar of Baroda for attempting to poison Colonel R. Phayre. He entertained H.R.H. the Prince of Wales in 1876. He was a G.C.S.I. : and a General : died June 20, 1886.

GWALIOR, MADHAVA (MADHOJI) RAO SINDIA, MAHARAJA OF (1730-1794)

Son of Ranoji Sindia, who, originally a slipper bearer of the Peshwa, rose to be an officer of rank : Madhava was illegitimate, the fourth of his five sons. He and his brother Dattaji were present in the war of 1751 against the French and at the battle of Panipat, where the Peshwa was completely defeated by the Afghans under Shuja, 1760-1 : after this battle, which virtually overthrew the Mahratta design to conquer the whole of India, Madhava became ruler of Ujain, in succession to his father. In the following years, he was an ally of the Poona Regent Raghunath, or Raghoba, fighting against the Jats of Bhartpur and against the Rohillas, annexing the fort of Gwalior and generally consolidating his power. Intrigues at the Courts of the Peshwa and of the Emperor of Delhi against the British ended in the treaty of Salbai between the Peshwa and the British in 1782, and led Warren Hastings to appreciate his talents so greatly that he left him virtually a free hand in the administration of Central India and Hindustan. He now came to be recognized as an independent Prince, though nominally the vassal of the Peshwa and the Delhi Emperor: with the aid of De Boigne, who entered his service about this time, he soon made himself feared by his neighbours, but in his attempt to attack the Raja of Jaipur was repulsed by a conspiracy of Rajput chiefs and Ismail Beg, who defeated him. In the revolt of Ghulam Kadir against the Emperor of Delhi, in 1788, Sindia took no part, but, after Delhi was retaken, he espoused the cause of the blind Emperor. One of his first acts was to re-engage De Boigne as Commander of his forces. He defeated Ismail Beg and the Rajputs in 1790, and entered the town of Ajmir. In 1791 he formed the famous alliance with Lord Cornwallis against Tippoo, which ended in the latter's defeat at Seringapatam. In 1794 he proceeded to Poona to invest the young Peshwa with the Vice-regency of the Empire, and received from him the title of Deputy Vice-Regent. In his absence, his territories were attacked by Ismail Beg and Holkar, who were both defeated by De Boigne. Madhava Rao died suddenly at Poona on Feb. 12, 1794, and it is not improbable that he was the victim of foul play on the part of Nana Farnavis, who was jealous of his influence. He early recognized the military power of the British, and did not oppose them for long. In his schemes of self-aggrandizement, he worked as the subordinate of the Peshwa and the Delhi Emperor.

HAFIZ RAHMAT KHAN (1710?-1774)

A famous Rohilla chief: born about 1710 in Afghanistan: uncle of Ali Muhammad, chief of the Rohillas, who had settled on the N.W. frontier of Oudh : joined his people in 1739 and received large grants of land from his nephew : on the death of Ali Muhammad, he was made " Hafiz " or " guardian " of his sons : but betrayed the trust and made himself virtual ruler of the country : entered into alliance with the Nawab of Oudh, Shuja-ud-daula, against the Mahrattas, engaging to pay him 40 lakhs in return for his aid. Sir Robert Barker, the English general, attested the treaty. The Mahrattas were driven out, but Rahmat Khan failed to fulfil his part of the engagement. The destruction of the Rohillas was the result : they were defeated at Miranpur Katra by the united forces of the Nawab and the English : Hafiz Rahmat Khan was killed in the battle (1774) : a man of education, and of literary attainments : a strong ruler, and on the whole a beneficent one, both towards the Rohillas and as regards his Hindu subjects.

HALLIDAY, SIR FREDERICK JAMES (1806-1901)

I.C.S.: born Dec. 26, 1806: son of Thomas Halliday of Ewell: educated at St. Paul's school, Rugby, and Haileybury: went out to Bengal in June, 1825: was Secretary to the Sadr Board of Revenue in 1836: Secretary to the Government of Bengal, 1838: Officiating Secretary to the Government of India in 1842: Secretary to the Home Department of the Government of India, 1849. While on furlough, in 1852-3, he was on 16 occasions examined before the Committees of the Lords and Commons on Indian subjects in connexion with the renewal of the E.I. Company's Charter: Member of the Governor-General's Supreme Council, Dec. 1853, to April, 1854: the first Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, from May 1, 1854, to May 1, 1859. His term of office as Lieutenant-Governor was eventful: the Sonthal insurrection required the movement of troops and strong measures for its suppression: the Indian mutiny did not eventually assume such proportions in Lower Bengal as in Upper India, but the earliest indications appeared at Barrackpur and Berhampur: outbursts occurred in other parts of the Lower Provinces, and, during the whole two years, Halliday's vigilance and administrative capacity were severely tried and never failed. He was held in high estimation by Lord Dalhousie, and had great influence with Lord Canning, who said of him, after the mutiny, that for many months he had been the "right hand of the Government." Halliday recorded a Minute on "The Mutinies as they affected the Lower Provinces under the Government of Bengal." He had also to deal with the new conditions attending the creation of Bengal into a separate Lieutenant-Governorship, and arising from the great Education despatch of 1854 from England, important Rent and Revenue legislation, and the introduction of Railways. He received the thanks of Parliament for his mutiny services: was made K.C.B. in 1860: and was Member of the Council of India from 1868 to 1886: he died Oct. 22, 1901. Of lofty stature and splendid physique, Halliday appeared to be the embodiment of great power, an impression which was strengthened by whatever he said, or wrote.

He wrote, 1824, a summary of his Indian administration, which is remembered for its length, for his victorious wars, and extension of British territory, as well as for his personal ability, both in his civil and military capacities.

HASTINGS, WARREN (1732-1818)

Governor-General: born Dec. 6, 1732: son of Pynaston Hastings: educated at Newington Butts and Westminster: first King's Scholar, 1747: went to Calcutta in civil employ of the E. I. Co. 1750: to Kasimbazar in 1753: Member of Council there: imprisoned at Murshidabad, 1756, joined the British refugees from Calcutta at Falta: Resident at Murshidabad, 1757-60, corresponding with Clive, the Governor of Calcutta: had difficulties with Raja Nuncomar (q.v.): Member of Council in Calcutta, 1761: sent to Patna to negotiate about inland trade: was struck in Council by a colleague: to England, 1764-9: sent to Madras as second in Council there, 1769, the Baron and Baroness von Imhoff being fellow-passengers on his ship: Governor of Bengal from April 13, 1772: the whole revenue and judicial administration was revised, and the conduct of superior native officials investigated: Hastings sent troops, according to an existing treaty, to assist the Nawab of Oudh against the Rohillas, who were defeated: by the Regulating Act of 1773, Hastings was appointed Governor-General, with four colleagues: the new regime took effect from Oct. 20, 1774: Francis, Clavering, Monson opposed him, Barwell siding with him: Nuncomar accused Hastings of corruption, Hastings charged Nuncomar and others with conspiracy: Nuncomar was himself arrested on a charge of forgery, tried, convicted and hanged on Aug. 5, 1775. Hastings sent George Boyle (q.v.) on a mission to the Teshu Lama of Tibet: and, later, Samuel Turner (q.v.) to Tashilhunpo in Tibet: originated the acquisition of revenue by farming out the opium trade. Hastings' conditional resignation of his office, accepted by the Court of Directors, but annulled by the Supreme Court: by the deaths of Monson and Clavering, he obtained predominance in Council: he married the divorcée, Baroness Imhoff, in Aug. 1877: he frustrated the operations of the Mahrattas and of Hyder Ali: on Aug. 17, 1780, he fought a duel with Francis (q.v.) and wounded him. By a force under Sir Eyre Coote, he drove Hyder Ali out of the Carnatic and made the treaty of Salbai on May 17, 1782, with Sindia for the Mahrattas: his demand on Chait Singh, Raja of Benares, for a war contribution, being resisted, he went to Benares to levy it; had to flee to Chunar, but eventually succeeded, and deposed Chait Singh: the Court of Proprietors approved his action: large sums of money were recovered by the Nawab of Oudh from "the Oudh Begams" to meet Hastings' demands, and he has been much blamed for his share in the occurrence. He established the Calcutta Madrasa and assisted in the foundation of the Asiatic Society of Bengal: he embarked for England Feb. 1, 1785: wrote his Review of the State of Bengal at sea. His impeachment, for maladministration, began in Feb. 1788, Burke and others being the managers, with the assistance of Sir P. Francis: Hastings was acquitted on all the charges in April, 1795, after a trial lasting 145 days: the trial cost him £70,000: the E. I. Co. gave him a grant of money. He received no honours. When he attended the House of Commons, in 1813, the whole House rose and did him honour. He was made Privy Councillor and D.C.L. of Oxford. He repurchased the family estate of Daylesford. He died Aug. 22, 1818. His great public services are admitted: his character and the means he employed have been keenly criticised, and will probably be always discussed, but later writings have done much to remove the unfavourable impression which Mill and Macaulay created against him. His motto, "Mens aequa in arduis," represents the tranquil fortitude with which he met the difficulties of his troubled career. His statue is in Calcutta.

HYDE, JOHN (1737?-1796)

Called to the bar from Lincoln's Inn: appointed a Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court, Calcutta, on its establishment, 1774: was one of the magistrates who, on May 6, 1775, committed Nuncomar (q.v.) to trial for forgery: was one of the Judges who tried Nuncomar. After more than 21 years' uninterrupted service as Judge, he died July 8, 1796, and was buried in Calcutta: a Government notification and lengthy epitaph testified to his virtues and the esteem in which he was held.

HYDERABAD, SIR ASAF JAH, NIZAM-UL-MULK OF (1866-)

Born Aug. 18, 1866: succeeded his father in 1869, when a Regency was established: he was invested with full power by Lord Ripon, when Viceroy and Governor-General, and assumed charge of his Government, Feb. 5, 1884: has more than once offered to the Government of India the services of his troops, and in 1887 offered a present of 60 lakhs for frontier defence: he is the Premier Prince of the Indian Empire: G.C.S.I., 1884: G.C.B., 1903.

HYDERABAD, NIZAM ALI, NIZAM OF (? -1803)

Son of Kamaruddin, the first Nizam-ul-Mulk: dethroned and imprisoned his brother, the Nizam Salabat Jang, 1761, and became Nizam: devastated the Carnatic, 1765, but was driven back: the Madras Government made a treaty at Hyderabad, Nov. 12, 1766, through Brig.-General Caillaud with Nizam Ali for mutual assistance, and the grant of territory for a subsidiary force. Nizam Ali treacherously deserted the English, and with Hyder Ali invaded the Carnatic, but, by another treaty of Feb. 26, 1768, renounced Hyder and regained the English alliance on certain terms: in 1788 he made over the Guntur Sircar to the English on certain payments: in the war with Tippoo, Nizam Ali made a treaty of offensive and defensive alliance with Cornwallis, 1790, and gained territory at the end of the war, 1792: the Mahrattas revived a claim against the Nizam for arrears of chout, and war resulted in the defeat of the Nizam and his army at Kurda in March, 1795: he had to cede territory and pay three crores of rupees: his eldest son, Ali Jah, rebelled, but was captured by the Nizam's French troops: another treaty of Sep. 1, 1798, was made between the British and the Nizam: Nizam Ali agreed to disband his French battalions: in the second war with Tippoo, 1799, the Nizam's army co-operated with the British troops, and the Nizam received territories by the partition treaty of Mysore: these territories were ceded to the British for the payment of the British subsidiary force at Hyderabad: Nizam Ali died, 1803.

HYDER ALI (1717 or 1722-1782)

Son of Fatah Muhammad, a military commander, and jagirdar of Budikota in Mysore: born in 1717 or 1722: first known as Naik: employed by the Mysore Raja as a volunteer in the siege of Devanahalli in 1749: next against Arcot, and in the subsequent struggle for the Nizam: by 1755 he was military governor of Dindigul, then a Mysore stronghold: by 1759 he commanded the Mysore Raja's Army, and received the title of Fatah

Bahadur. He gradually obtained the control of affairs and assumed the sovereign power, deposing the Hindu Raja, Chikka Krishnaraj Wodiar, captured Bednore and conquered Malabar in 1766. Allied with the Nizam, he invaded the Carnatic in 1767, and, on the Nizam's retirement, prosecuted the war alone: in 1769 he was within five miles of Madras, when the Madras Governor concluded an offensive and defensive treaty with him, and the Bombay Government made another treaty with him in 1770. He was more than once reduced to great straits by the Mahrattas, who several times invaded the Mysore dominions, but the English declined to assist him. When the French and English declared war in 1778, and the English took Mahé, Hyder, who had become the most formidable power in the Peninsula, received the missionary, Schwartz, as an envoy from the Governor of Madras, but, negotiations failing, invaded the Madras territory in 1780, defeated Colonel Baillie at Perambakam, took Arcot and other places: he was defeated at Porto Novo on July 1, 1781, by Sir Eyre Coote, who relieved Vellore, and met him in the indecisive action at Arni on June 2, 1782: he died near Chitore, Dec. 7, 1782. Hyder was a born soldier, a first-rate horseman, heedless of danger, full of energy and resource, severe, cruel, cold, indifferent to religion, shrewd in business—though quite uneducated—with a retentive memory: he inspired great terror: with better support from the French, he might have driven the English out of Southern India.

IBBETSON, SIR DENZIL CHARLES JELF (1847—)

I.C.S.: born Aug. 30, 1847: son of Rev. Denzil John Holt Ibbetson: educated at St. Peter's College, Adelaide, South Australia, and St. John's College, Cambridge: entered the Indian Civil Service, 1870: posted to the Panjab: after serving in various posts, including Superintendent of Census, Director of Public Instruction and Financial Commissioner, was appointed Secretary to the Government of India in the Revenue and Agriculture Department: Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces: Member of the Supreme Council since 1902: author of Failing to obtain any satisfaction of his claim, he retired to Bagdad, to pass his life in sanctity. He was much liked and respected by the English in England, Constantinople and Bagdad: was made G.C.S.I. in 1882: died at Bagdad, Dec. 21, 1887.

ILBERT, SIR COURTENAY PEREGRINE (1841-)

Born June 12, 1841: son of Rev. Peregrine Arthur Ilbert: educated at Marlborough and Balliol College, Oxford: Scholar: Hertford, Ireland, Craven and Eldon Scholar: called to the bar from Lincoln's Inn, 1869: Legal Member of the Supreme Council, 1882-6: in that capacity had charge, on behalf of the Government of India, of the "Ilbert Bill," which raised so much opposition: Vice-Chancellor of Calcutta University, 1885-6: Parliamentary Assistant Counsel and Counsel to the Treasury, 1886-1901: Clerk to the House of Commons, 1901: author of The Government of India, 1898; Legislative Methods and Forms, 1901, etc: C.I.E., 1882: C.S.I. 1885: K.C.S.I. 1895.

IMADUDDIN, REV. D.D. (1830 ?-1900)

Son of Maulvi Sirazuddin, a Muhammadan theologian: descended from the Persian royal house and the Muhammadan Saint Kutb Jamal: born about 1830, at Panipat, near which town his family had large estates: educated at Agra Government College: became a Sufi or Muhammadan mystic: travelled about, all over India, preaching Islam: was present on behalf of Islam against Christianity in the "Agra Controversy": subsequently became a teacher in the Government Normal School, Lahore: baptized at Umritsar, April 29, 1866: ordained Deacon, 1868: Priest, 1872, by the Bishop of Calcutta: made D.D. by the Archbishop of Canterbury, 1884: invited to attend the "World's Parliament on Religions" in Chicago, to which he sent a paper: wrote a number of Hindustani books, the principal being a Life of Christ, Lectures on Christian evidence, commentaries in Urdu on St. Matthew's Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles: died at Umritsar, Aug. 28, 1900.

IMPEY, SIR ELIJAH (1732-1809)

Son of Elijah Impey, merchant: born June 13, 1732: educated at Westminster (with Warren Hastings): King's Scholar: and at Trinity College, Cambridge: Scholar: Fellow: called to the bar from Lincoln's Inn, 1756: in 1772, counsel for the E. I. Co. before the House of Commons: under the Regulating Act of 1773 was appointed the first Chief Justice of the new Supreme Court at Calcutta, i.e. Chief Justice of Bengal: knighted: to India in 1774: presided in 1775 at the trial of Nuncomar (q.v.) for forgery, and, after the jury's verdict of guilty, passed sentence of death: and Nuncomar was hanged, Aug. 5: Impey's conduct on the trial has been impugned as having been actuated in behalf of Warren Hastings: there is no proof of collusion, and Impey has been pronounced by high authority to have behaved with absolute fairness: in 1777, he decided in favour of Hastings on the question of his alleged resignation of the Governor-Generalship: he sentenced (Sir) P. Francis (q.v.) to pay Rs. 50,000 damages in the Grand case: he was in 1780 made President of the new Sadr Diwani Adalat: there is no proof that he received extra salary for the office: at the instigation of Francis, through Burke in England, he was recalled in 1783, to answer six charges of illegality, which Sir Gilbert Elliot, afterwards Lord Minto (q.v.), brought forward in 1787: Impey defended himself at the bar of the House of Commons and the impeachment was abandoned: M.P. for New Romney, 1790-6: died Oct. 1, 1809. Owing to Burke (prompted by Francis) and to Mill's history (followed by Thornton and Macaulay,) Impey was long regarded as "one of the ogres of Indian history, a traditional monster of iniquity." His Life, by his son, E. B. Impey, 1846, did something to rehabilitate his name, and, later, high authorities have done more: the fact that the virulent attempts to impeach him failed is most significant.

IMPEY, EUGENE CLUTTERBUCK
(1830-1904)

Colonel: born 1830: son of Edward Impey, B.C.S., and grandson of Sir Elijah Impey: educated privately and at Wadham College, Oxford: joined the 5th Bengal N.I., 1851: A.A.G.G. INDORE, JASWANT RAO HOLKAR
MAHARAJA OF (1775?-1811)

An illegitimate son of Maharaja Tukaji Rao: on the murder of his half-brother, Kashi Rao, he asserted himself, raised a large army and fought with Sindia, defeating both him and the Peshwa, Baji Rao, in 1802 at Poona, which he took: he declined to join the other Mahratta chiefs against the British, but took his own line, as a freebooter, in Rajputana, and, after compelling Colonel Monson to make a disastrous retreat in July, 1804, was defeated by Lord Lake in 1804-5, and compelled to make peace and surrender territory. He became insane in 1806, and his wife, Tulsi Bai, became regent. He died Oct. 20, 1811.

INDORE, MALHAR RAO HOLKAR,
MAHARAJA OF (? -1786)

The first and greatest Prince of the Holkar family: came to notice first as an officer in the service of the Peshwa, Baji Rao, about 1724: was an early Mahratta adventurer in Northern India, and obtained the Indore district in jagir about 1733: was most active after Baji Rao's death in 1740, until his own death, May 19, 1766.

INDORE, MALHAR RAO HOLKAR,
MAHARAJA OF (1805-1833)

Son of Jaswant Rao Holkar (q.v.): succeeded as an infant: adopted by Jaswant's widow, Tulsi Bai, who became regent: the Army became predominant in the State, and in 1817 took up arms against the British: Tulsi Bai, on being suspected of British proclivities, was murdered: the army was routed by Malcolm at Mahidpur, Dec. 21, 1817: terms were made, Malhar Rao being treated as an independent prince: he died in 1833.

INDORE, TAKOJI RAO HOLKAR I,
MAHARAJA OF (? -1797)

Was made Commander in Chief of Holkar's force in 1767 by Ahlia Bai (q.v.), the daughter-in-law of the late Maharaja Malhar Rao Holkar I, and served her with devoted fidelity till her death in 1795. He was defeated by De Boigne (q.v.), Sindia's general, 1794, and ruled from 1795 until he died Aug. 15, 1797.

INDORE, SIR TAKOJI RAO HOLKAR
II, MAHARAJA OF (1832-1886)

Was nominated successor by the Regent mother of the late Maharaja and recognized in 1843 by the British Government: invested with authority, 1852: the thoroughness of his loyalty during the mutiny of 1857 was doubted, but, after the defeat of his army, which attacked the British Residency at Indore, his prudent and circumspect behaviour was held to entitle him to confidence: and he was made a G.C.S.I. in 1861. He developed the resources of his State, which he administered with skill and attention to business: giving much time to military and police matters: he received the Prince of Wales with great ceremony when H.R.H. visited India in 1875-6: was made a General in 1877: he died June 17, 1886.

A member of the famous family of Seths of Mathura, celebrated as the leading bankers in N. India, and for their charity and beneficence: eldest son of Mani Ram (died 1836), founder of the firm, under whom the business flourished greatly, and the wealth and influence of the family rapidly increased. During the mutiny, Lakshmi Chand and his brothers, Radha Krishan and Gobind Das, displayed conspicuous loyalty. They warned the Collector of the impending outbreak, and sent information to Agra, which enabled the authorities there to disarm the native troops. When the station of Mathura was burnt, the Seths sheltered the European residents and conveyed them by boat to Agra: took charge of the treasure, maintained public order: made large advances of money to Government, when none was procurable elsewhere, and throughout the mutiny maintained communication between Agra and Delhi at their own expense. For these services, Lakshmi Chand was made Rao Bahadur and presented with confiscated estates assessed at over Rs. 16,000, on favourable terms. Many of the religious and other buildings in Mathura were erected by the Seths, whose liberality was proverbial. Lakshmi Chand remained a Jain, but his brothers were converted to Vaishnavism: he left an only son, Raghunath Das.

LALLY, THOMAS ARTHUR, COUNT DE—AND BARON DE TOLLENDAL (1700-1766)

French General: born 1700: son of Sir Gerard O'Lally, an Irish exile, inheriting an implacable hatred of England: distinguished himself in the French-Austrian war of 1734 at Phillipsburg, and later at Fontenoy, Laffelat, Bergen-op-Zoom: to England in 1743, possibly as a spy: on the declaration of war between France and England in May, 1756, Lally was appointed, as one of the most promising French officers, to be Governor-General and C. in C., to command the French expedition to India, to expel the British thence: he, with Count d'Aché, reached Pondicherry in April-May, 1758, at once took Cuddalore, Fort St. David and Devikota: unsuccessfully attacked Tanjore: captured Arcot in Oct. 1758: was joined by Bussy: besieged Madras for two months from Dec. 12, 1758, but retired on the appearance, in Feb. 1759, of an English fleet, under Admiral Pocock. Lally took the field in 1759, and met Colonel Eyre Coote at Wandiwash, was defeated there on Jan. 22, 1760, and lost other towns. Lally was then besieged from May, 1760, in Pondicherry by Coote, and forced to capitulate on Jan. 14, 1761, the French power in India thus collapsing, chiefly through want of proper support from France. Lally was sent to Madras, and to England as a prisoner of war: on his return to France, he was thrown into the Bastille, kept under trial for 2½ years, accused of having betrayed the interests of the King; condemned on May 9, 1766, and executed the same day. In 1783 the sentence was annulled, and Lally's estates were restored to his son.

LYTTON, EDWARD ROBERT BULWER, FIRST EARL OF (1831-1891)

Viceroy and Governor-General: son of the first Baron Lytton: born Nov. 8, 1831: educated at Harrow and Bonn: was Private Secretary to his uncle, Lord Dalling, at Washington and Florence: paid Attaché at the Hague, St. Petersburg, Constantinople and Vienna: wrote, under the name of Owen Meredith, Clytemnestra, the Earl's Return, and other Poems, The Wanderer, Lucile, Tannhauser, The Ring of Amasis: held diplomatic appointments at Belgrade, Vienna, Copenhagen, Athens, Lisbon, Madrid, again at Vienna, Paris, and was Minister at Lisbon, 1872-6, when he was, after declining the Governorship of Madras, chosen by Lord Beaconsfield to be Viceroy and Governor-General of India: wrote Chronicles and Characters, Orval, or the Fool of Time, Fables in Song, etc. He succeeded his father in the Peerage, 1873, and held the Viceroyalty from April 12, 1876, to June 8, 1880: it was an eventful and important time.

Negotiations with the Amir of Afghanistan were resumed, but fruitless: the reception of a Russian envoy at Kabul, and the rejection of a British mission, led to the Afghan war, 1879-80, which is a matter of history: Lytton's policy, denounced at the time, can appeal to its results. He conducted the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi on Jan. 1, 1877, for the proclamation of H.M. Queen Victoria's assumption of the title of Empress of India: he had to deal with the famines in Bombay, Madras, Mysore, and visited these Provinces in Aug.-Sept. 1877: the Famine Commission sat, and the system of "famine insurance" was established: the finances were further decentralized: internal customs were abolished: the cotton duties repealed: the Vernacular Press Act was passed: provision was made for the admission of more natives of India to civilians' appointments: his speeches, minutes, and despatches have never been surpassed: his disregard of convention gave opportunity to hostile critics, who gave little credit to his genius and great qualities. He was made an Earl in 1880 on his resignation with Lord Beaconsfield's Ministry. After leaving India, he was Ambassador to France, 1887-91: and wrote his father's Life, Glenavert, After Paradise, King Poppy: died at Paris, Nov. 24, 1891.

Bentinck, the Governor-General, until he went on to Calcutta in September. As Legal Member, he was head of the Law Commission and largely responsible for the preparation of the Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure. He also wrote a great minute on Education in India, and obtained a decision in preference of English studies rather than of Oriental languages and literature. His sister married (Sir) Charles Trevelyan, and Macaulay lived with them in Calcutta, in the house in Chowringhi now occupied by the Bengal Club. He resigned his appointment on Jan. 17, 1838. He wrote his essay on Clive in Jan. 1840, and on Warren Hastings in Oct. 1841: M.P. for Edinburgh, 1839-47, and 1852-6: Secretary at War, and in the Cabinet, 1839-41: in 1853 he supported the India Bill for the renewal of the E. I. Co.'s Charter: in 1854 he was Chairman of the Committee appointed to arrange for the examination of candidates for the Indian Civil Service by open competition, and wrote the report. He died Dec. 28, 1859. His parliamentary career, his History of England and literary productions had, except in respect of the matters above mentioned, no special connexion with India.

NANA, FARNAVIS (1741-1800)

The famous Mahratta Brahman minister: his real name was Balaji Janadhan: he was present at, and fled from, the battle of Panipat, 1761. When Madho Rao I became Peshwa in 1761, his uncle, the Regent, Raghunath Rao, gave Nana Farnavis the office of Fardnavisi (record-writing). He became the intimate friend of his sovereign, Madho Rao, who died in 1772, and was succeeded by his brother, Narayan Rao. Nana Farnavis became head of the Civil Department, and chief director of all Poona political movements until Madho Rao II died. Narayan Rao was murdered in 1773 by his uncle Raghunath, who usurped the Peshwaship, until Narayan's widow, Gunga Bai, had a child named Madho Rao Narayan. A Regency, consisting of Nana Farnavis, Sakaram Bapu, and the widow, ruled the State until Nana Farnavis became virtually supreme ruler of Poona. In March, 1776, the treaty of Purandhar was concluded between the Mahrattas and the English: this treaty Nana Farnavis obstructed, and he was believed to have made a secret engagement with the French. He and Sakaram quarrelled: the latter, striving for the restoration of Raghunath, sought help from the Bombay Government: Nana Farnavis, being the paramour of Gunga Bai, supported Madho Rao the Peshwa: further hostilities occurred, the English supporting Raghunath: the Convention of Wargaum, made in 1779, was disavowed: eventually peace was restored by the treaty of Saibal of May 17, 1782, which Nana Farnavis ratified. Raghunath's cause failed, and he soon died. Sakaram was made over to Nana Farnavis by Sindia, confined in a fort, and died there. Madho Rao's title as Peshwa and Nana Farnavis' Regency were recognized. The latter was then the real head of affairs at Poona. Lord Cornwallis received from him a contingent of Mahrattas against Tippoo in 1791. Antagonism arose between Nana Farnavis and Madhava Rao Sindia (q.v.), each having claims against the other. Sindia died in 1794, leaving Nana Farnavis without a rival among the Mahrattas. They made great demands on the Nizam and defeated his army at Kurdla in March, 1795. Nana Farnavis was then at the height of his prosperity as minister, when the Peshwa, Madho Rao, committed suicide. Raghunath's son, Baji Rao, became Peshwa. Nana fled, was seized at Poona and imprisoned: became reconciled to Baji Rao: they evaded alliance with the British Government: Nana Farnavis died on March 13, 1800.

NANA SAHIB (1820 ?-1859 ?)

The chief rebel leader in the mutiny, whose barbarous cruelty and treachery have never been forgotten: his real name was Dundupant, of Bithur, near Cawnpur: the adopted son of Baji Rao (q.v.), the ex-Peshwa, who died in Dec. 1852. His claim to the continuation of Baji Rao's annual pension of 8 lakhs was fully considered and rejected, but he maintained friendly relations with, and showed hospitality to, the English residents at Cawnpur. He was allowed a retinue of all arms. He aimed at restoring the Mahratta Empire and proclaimed himself Peshwa. In the mutiny he attacked Sir Hugh Wheeler's entrenchments at Cawnpur, and, on the latter's surrender, treacherously ordered the massacre of Europeans, men, women and children, on the Ganges, on June 27, and again on July 15. He was defeated at Bithur by Havelock on July 16, 1857, when he fled. He was in action again later, and continued to instigate hostilities: until Sir Colin Campbell drove him into Nipal at the end of 1858. Government offered a reward of a lakh of rupees for his capture, but he escaped, probably in the Nipal jungles, and was never caught. He is supposed to have died about 1859.

NELSON, HORATIO, VISCOUNT AND DUKE OF BRONTE (1758-1805)

Admiral: born Sep. 29, 1758: Midshipman in his 12th year: after sailing to the W. Indies and on an expedition to the N. Pole, he went to the E. Indies in 1773 in the Seahorse frigate, under Captain George Farmer. He was there for 2 years, visiting "every port in India from Bengal to Bussora," when his health broke down, and the Commodore, Sir Edward Hughes, ordered him to England in the Dolphin. There is evidence that he was transferred from the Seahorse to the Dolphin at Bombay on March 15, 1776. His service on the E. I. station was uneventful, but he appears to have felt the effects of the climate, probably from that of the Persian Gulf, about Bussora and Muscat. It is not recorded that he was in India again. After the battle of the Nile he wrote Aug. 9, 1798, to the Governor of Bombay, to tell him of the destruction of the French Fleet, and the consequent preservation of India from any attempt against it by the French. The extraordinary expenses which would have been incurred for the defence of Bombay—which Nelson knew would have been their first object—were thus prevented. His autograph letter of July 3, 1799, is extant, thanking the E. I. Co. for their present of £10,000 on the occasion of his victory at Aboukir Bay. Nelson was killed at Trafalgar on Oct. 21, 1805.

I. Company:

most of the best houses in Calcutta were owned by him. In the beginning of 1757, when the English were arranging with Mir Jafar and others to dethrone Suraj-ud-daula, Omichand, being cognisant of the conspiracy, asked for thirty lakhs as the price of silence: Clive designed to make him believe that the English intended to reward his services by inserting an article in the treaty drawn between them and Mir Jafar. Two treaties were drawn up, one fictitious, the other genuine. Omichand was shown the fictitious treaty, which provided for his reward. Admiral Watson had refused to sign this treaty, and his signature was written by another hand. After the battle of Plassy, Omichand was made aware of the genuine treaty, in which no mention was made of him. It is said that, on perceiving that he was cheated, he fainted away and lost his reason. The accuracy of this statement has been questioned. He died suddenly at Malda, Dec. 5, 1758.

Li-General: born on Jan. 29, 1803: educated at the Marischal College, Aberdeen: entered the Indian Army at 16: acting Adjutant of a Bombay regt. in 1820: was a keen sportsman, from 1822: in 1823-4 took 74 "first spears" out of 123: and between 1825 and 1834 was at the deaths of 191 tigers, besides many other large animals: was employed in Khandesh for some years, disciplining the Bhils by his Bhil corps and politic measures, and in Guzarat, 1835-8, reducing turbulent chiefs: Political Agent in Mahi Kanta: he was attached, in 1838, to Sir John (Lord) Keane's staff, when commanding the Bombay Army through Kandahar and Ghazni to Kabul. Outram, from Kabul, led the pursuit of Amir Dost Muhammad across the Hindu Kush, in 1839, and took a prominent part in the operations in South Afghanistan. In 1839 he was Political Agent at Hyderabad in Sind, and in 1841 in Upper Sind, and cultivated friendship with the Amirs. Outram, differing in his views from his superior, Sir Charles Napier, and Lord Ellenborough, regarding the annexation of Sind, a prolonged controversy ensued: he advocated the cause of the Amirs in England as strongly as in India. He heroically defended the Hyderabad Residency on Feb. 15, 1843, against 8,000 Beluchis: Lt-Colonel: and C.B.: he was Resident at Satara in 1845, and in 1847 at Baroda, where he exposed corruption in high places. The Bombay Government removed him, but Lord Dalhousie reinstated him, and made him Resident at Lucknow in Dec. 1854, and, later, when Oudh was annexed in 1856 on Outram's recommendation, the first Chief Commissioner, and K.C.B. Outram was given the command of the Persian war in 1856-7, and made G.C.B. on its conclusion. In the mutiny he commanded two Divisions of the Bengal Army, and accompanied the relief column to Lucknow, as a volunteer, in Sep. 1857, magnanimously yielding the command to Sir Henry Havelock, subsequently assuming his superior military rank, besides his position as Chief Commissioner. On the second relief, in Nov. Outram retired to the Alambagh, and held it against 120,000 rebels until the final capture of Lucknow in March, 1858. He was Military Member of the Supreme Council from 1858 to 1860, when he retired. He was made K.C.S.I. in 1861, and D.C.L. He died on March 11, 1863, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. He was made a Baronet after the mutiny. In 1842, at a public dinner, Sir Charles Napier described him as the "Bayard of India," and the name has clung to him. His exploits and his great character—brave, high-minded, ambitious, warm-tempered, humble, modest, chivalrous, kind-hearted—have made Outram conspicuous among the heroes of Indian history. Statues of him have been erected in London and Calcutta.

1782: Prime Minister, 1783-1801, and 1804-6. His influence on Indian affairs was exerted on several occasions. His first India Bill was rejected by 8 votes on Jan. 23, 1784: his second Bill, passed May 18, 1784, as the Statute 24 Geo. III, c. 25, established the Board of Control, commonly called the India Board, to consist of Commissioners for the affairs of India, with very extensive powers. The Home Government of India nominally passed from the E. I. Co. to the Crown: but the Statute left large powers to the Court of Directors. The complex system of Government thus created endured until 1858. When the Opposition attacked Warren Hastings in 1786, Pitt voted silently against the Rohilla charge, June 2, but spoke and voted, June 13, for the Benares charge: again, for the charge relating to the Begams of Oudh: this vote, as Lord Rosebery has pointed out, made the impeachment of W. Hastings inevitable, and it was carried out. He passed also the Act of 1786, which gave the Governor-General power to over-ride his Council, and he passed the Declaratory Act of 1788, which required the Board of Control to maintain a permanent body of troops out of the funds of the E.I. ROY, RAJA RAMMOHAN (1772-1833)

Son of Ramkanta Roy, who was manager of some estates of the Maharaja of Burdwan: studied Persian and Arabic at Patna: and Sanskrit at Benares: was particularly well versed in Sanskrit literature. At the age of 15 he published his famous work on Idolatry in Bengali, in which he contended that the popular religion of the Hindus was contrary to the practice of their ancestors and the doctrine of the ancient authorities. For this he incurred his father's displeasure and was turned out of the house: he wandered for 4 years, even to Tibet. He was readmitted by his mother on his father's death. At the age of 21 he commenced the study of English, in which he became proficient: he also studied French, Latin, Greek, and Hebrew. Employed in the Collectorate at Rangpur, he rose to be Sarishadar, but retired from Government service in 1813. He then commenced a crusade against the popular religion, Going to Calcutta, he translated into Bengali the Vedanta and the Vedantasara and the Upanishads: the latter he also translated into English. He studied the Koran in Arabic, the Old Testament in Hebrew, and the New Testament in Greek. In 1820 he published, in Sanskrit and Bengali, Precepts of Jesus, the Guide to Peace and Happiness, in which he denied the Divinity of Christ. This brought him into controversy with the Serampur Missionaries, and on their refusal to print his Final Appeal, he established a press of his own. Dr. Marshman answered him, and the publications attracted considerable attention, both in England and America. Rammohan soon after founded a Periodical, called The Brahmanical Magazine, with the object of defending the religious books of the Hindus. He formed a religious association, called the Atmya Sabha, and in 1828 founded the Brahma Samaj "for the worship and adoration of the Eternal, Unsearchable, Immutable Being, who is the Author and Preserver of the Universe." The objects of the new Church were described in the trust-deed of 1830. This new Theism aimed at "the calm worship of the Deity, the practice of virtue and charity, reverence for all that is sincere and helpful in every faith, and active participation in every movement for the bettering of mankind." He claimed to have established a pure monotheistic form of worship for the benefit of Hindus, Muhamadans, and Christians. As a social reformer he preached against Sati, Polygamy and Kulinism, and advocated the remarriage of widows. In 1830 he received the title of Raja from the ex-Emperor of Delhi, and was deputed by him to visit England, to advocate certain claims. There, as a republican in his politics, he was well received by the reforming liberals and advanced thinkers. In 1831 he visited France: returned to England, he was present at the passing of the India Bill in 1833. Max Müller, Monier Williams, the poet Campbell, Brougham and Bentham befriended him. In 1833, on the invitation of Dr. Carpenter, he went to live at Bristol and, while meditating a voyage to America, died of fever, at Stapleton Grove, on Sep. 27, 1833. He was one of the founders of the Hindu College in Calcutta in 1817, and in 1823 addressed a letter to Lord Amherst on the comparative merits of English and Sanskrit education.

SALAR JANG, NAWAB SIR (1829-1883)

Statesman: his real name was Mir Turab Ali Khan: born Jan. 1829, son of Mir Muhammad Ali Khan: a scion of a noble family settled in Hyderabad: his grandfather and great-grandfather had been in the service of the Nizam as Ministers of State: educated privately, and took service under the State: in May, 1853, on the death of his uncle, Suraj-ul-mulk, Prime Minister of Hyderabad, he was called on to administer its affairs as Prime Minister. He disbanded large bands of Arab troops, subdued robber chieftains, and put down lawlessness: refilled the Treasury, which was almost empty: during the mutiny of 1857 he rendered invaluable services to the Indian Government, and, through his influence, Central India and the Dekkan and Hyderabad remained loyal: he sent timely warning to the Residency, when it was threatened with attack. From 1859 to 1869 intrigues were on foot to depose him, and on two occasions his life was attempted. During the lifetime of the Nizam Afzal-ud-daula, he was hardly a free agent. In 1869, on the death of the Nizam, he was made a co-Regent of the State, during the minority of the successor. In 1876 he visited England, in the hope of obtaining the restitution of the Berars, which was the ambition of his life. On his return to India he continued to administer the affairs of the State till his death from cholera, on Feb. 8, 1883. His sudden death was attributed to poison, but there was no evidence. He was a remarkable man, a gentleman in every sense of the word, of great ability, and ever loyal to the Nizam, though he was always an object of suspicion to his jealous master. He was G.C.S.I., and a D.C.L. of Oxford.

SCUDDER, REV. HENRY MARTYN, D.D. (1822-1895).

Born 1822: the eldest and probably the most distinguished of Dr. John Scudder's sons: one of the most gifted men that have laboured in India: probably no Missionary in South India has used the spoken Tamil with greater power, and but a few have attained a greater mastery over the classical dialect. His books, notably Spiritual Teaching, The Bazaar Book, and Jewel Mine of Salvation, have proved invaluable aids to Missionaries and native preachers: they are still used in the Arcot districts: also he made an excellent translation of the liturgy. Arriving in America, he became pastor of a prominent church in San Francisco, and afterwards built up strong churches in Brooklyn and Chicago: thus he worked with distinguished success on two continents: died 1895: M.D., and D.D.

SCUDDER, DR. JOHN (1793- ?)

Born Sept. 3, 1793, at Freehold, New Jersey, son of Joseph Scudder and grandson of Dr. Nathaniel Scudder (killed in the revolutionary war, 1781): his ancestor, Thomas Scudder, settled in America from England about 1635 : a pioneer Missionary of the Reformed Church in India. Having chosen the medical profession, Dr. Scudder settled in New York City : while there engaged in his profession, the claims of the heathen were brought vividly before his mind in a peculiar manner : in professional attendance on a lady, while in the ante-room, he took up a tract with the title, "The Conversion of the World ; or, the Claims of Six Hundred Millions ; and the Ability and Duty of the Churches respecting them." The words of the tract pierced his heart, and he had no rest until he had offered his services to the Foreign Mission Board. At 26 he abandoned home and friends, and with his young family sailed for India : arrived in Ceylon, Feb., 1820 : entered upon his work with the earnestness and devotion which characterized his whole life. After labouring with great success as a medical Missionary in Ceylon for 16 years, he removed in 1836 to Madras, where a new Mission was opened : there his eldest son, Henry Martyn, joined him as a Missionary in 1844. In 1853 the father and son decided to open a Mission in the Arcot District, 80 miles W. of Madras. The Arcot Mission has ever been associated with the name of Scudder, no fewer than 9 children of Dr. John Scudder and 9 grandchildren having been connected with it.

SCUDDER, REV. LEWIS R.
(1861-)

Grandson of Dr. John Scudder (q.v.) : he graduated from Princeton University, U.S.A., in 1882, and M.D. from New York Medical College in 1888, and has worked 17 years in India : has considerably enlarged the medical institution at Arcot, having opened Branch Dispensaries and special accommodation for high caste people : he has maintained his family's name by his earnest and successful work at the Arcot Mission.

SCUDDER, REV. SILAS D. (1833-1877).

Seventh son of Dr. John Scudder (q.v.) : was a medical Missionary in the Arcot Mission : he established the Hospital and Dispensary there, and was one of the first to introduce western medical science among the natives of the district : the Madras Government gave over to him a fine building and ample ground for the hospital and contributed its expenses. Lord Napier of Ettrick (q.v.), Governor of Madras, conducted Mr. W. H. Seward, U.S. Sec. of State, when visiting India, to this hospital and dispensary as one of the chief objects of interest in his Presidency. Many thousands of Hindus sought the benefits of the treatment granted gratuitously. Dr. Scudder worked with untiring industry, with great spirit and vigour : attending also to a large out-door practice. High-caste ladies placed themselves under his treatment. A class of medical students was also taught : some of them are now successful practitioners. He was in India nearly 13 years. When his health was broken he went home to die : he never recovered from the injuries received from overwork, from a tropical sun and malarious climate : died 1877.

SEAL, MATI LAL (1791-1854)

Son of a petty tradesman : educated at a primary village school : at 17 went on pilgrimage, and travelled in Upper India : became a clerk, and storekeeper at Fort William, Calcutta : and established a business, first as a dealer in empty bottles and corks, then as a ship's banian : became, by 1823, Director of 3 mercantile firms, and was connected with many firms and houses in Calcutta : greatly respected for his integrity, and the good use he made of his wealth : he became a large owner of land and houses : founded, in 1842, a higher-class English school in Calcutta and liberally endowed it : gave land for the erection of the Calcutta Medical College : "Seal's Free School" is still one of the best of its kind in Calcutta : the poor-house which he established in 1848 at Belgharia still exists : died May 20, 1854.

SEATON, SIR THOMAS (1806-1876)

Born 1806 : son of John Fox Seaton : joined the E. I. Co.'s 10th N.I. in 1823 : at the siege of Bhartpur, 1826 : with the 35th regt. in Kabul in 1839 : returned to India with Sale's Brigade, fighting their way to Jalalabad: was in its defence: at the re-occupation of Kabul: C.B., and Major: Brig-Major at Agra: in the mutiny, his regt., the 60th N.I., mutinied: he was at the siege of Delhi: Lt-Colonel of the 1st European Fusiliers: held Fatehghar, and was engaged in 1858 at Kankar, Buhaganj: K.C.B., 1858: retired as Maj-General, 1859: wrote his autobiography, From Cadet to Colonel, 1866: died Sep. 11, 1876.

SEN, KESHAB CHANDRA (1838-1884)

Born Nov. 19, 1838: a kinsman of the Sena Rajas: grandson of Ram Kamal Sen, who was Diwan of the Calcutta Mint, and a Secretary of the Asiatic Society of Bengal: and son of Piari Mohan Sen, who survived his father only three years, and died in 1848: educated at the Hindu Metropolitan, and Presidency Colleges, Calcutta: was thrown much into the society of the Christian Missionaries: in 1857 he joined the Brahmo Samaj, the reformed Theistic Society founded by Raja Rammohan Roy (q.v.) and extended by Debendranath Tagore (q.v.): served as a clerk in the Bank of Bengal, 1859-61, but resigned his appointment: the rest of his life was spent as a Brahmo Missionary. In 1862 he established a central association at Calcutta, and was appointed Minister of the Brahmo Samaj by Debendranath Tagore: he visited Bombay and Madras on a Missionary tour and established branches of the Samaj. Differences arose between him and Debendranath Tagore as to the abandonment of old national customs, the advocacy of the re-marriage of widows and the removal of the Brahmanical thread: in 1866 he retired from the Brahmo Samaj and established what is known as the Brahmo Samaj of India as opposed to the Adi, i.e. the original Brahmo Samaj: in 1866 he lectured on "Jesus Christ, Europe and Asia," and his conversion to Christianity seemed probable until the publication of Great Men, in which he contended that other men also were "above ordinary humanity." He opened his own Brahmo Mandir on Aug. 22, 1869, and then went on a Missionary tour to the North-West Provinces and Bombay. He visited the Viceroy (Lord Lawrence) at Simla and induced him to introduce a Bill for legalizing Brahma marriages. In 1870 he visited England and was well received, visiting the chief towns of England and Scotland, and speaking at more than 70 public meetings and chapels. On his return to India he established the Indian Reform Association: the Bharat Asram, or Indian Hermitage, was opened in 1872: in 1872 he saw the Brahma Marriage Act passed. From 1875 to 1878 he was employed in improving the organization of the Brahma Samaj, but his popularity among his countrymen decreased, chiefly on account of his marrying his daughter to the young Maharaja of Cooch Behar, both of them being under the ages fixed by the Brahma Marriage Act. His appeal to Adesa, or the voice of his conscience, in this and other matters, failed to satisfy his followers. This created a schism, and a new Samaj, called the Sadharan or Catholic Brahma Samaj, was founded on May 15. From 1880 he preached a new dispensation, in which simple Theism was replaced by mystical doctrines, claiming special divine inspiration. For the rest of his life he suffered from nervous depression. In person Keshab Chandra Sen was a handsome, powerfully built man, 6 feet high. He was simple and pure in character, almost austere in his habits, singularly modest, and thoroughly independent: died Jan. 8, 1884.

A restless adventurer, he never ceased to plot to recover the throne. He was defeated by Dost Muhammad in 1833, when making an attempt at Kandahar. The British Government, distrusting Dost Muhammad, replaced Shah Shuja on the throne at Kabul, on Aug. 7, 1839, in the first Afghan war. The British force continued their occupation of Kabul, to support Shah Shuja, but he was not accepted by the people, and failed to establish himself as ruler. After the death of Macnaghten, and the destruction of the British force, he shut himself up in the Bala Hissar, at Kabul. When he left it, on April 5, 1842, to place himself at the head of the army, he was killed at Akbar Khan's instance by an ambushed body of the Barakzais.

Deo Narayan Singh was made Rao Bahadur for his services in the disturbances of 1853: in the mutiny he rendered invaluable assistance to the civil authorities: rescued the fugitive Missionaries, and was largely responsible for the maintenance of order: made a Raja, given a khilat, and a further annual grant of Rs. 25,000 from the revenues of Saiyid Bhitari: Member of the Governor-General's Legislative Council: K.C.S.I. in 1866: died suddenly at Benares in Aug. 1870.

SINGH, MAHARAJA BAHADUR, SIR DULIP (1837-1893)

Born Feb. 1837: son of Maharaja Ranjit Singh (g.v.) of the Panjab: was placed on the throne in 1843: during his minority the Sikh wars of 1845-6 and 1848-9 occurred: a Council of Regency and a British Resident at Lahore were appointed. On the annexation of the Panjab, the Maharaja, by a Treaty, dated March 29, 1849, made over his dominions to the E. I. Co., receiving an annuity. Dr. Sir John Login was his Superintendent: he lived at Fatehghar, 1850-4, where he became a Christian in 1853: he went to England in 1854, was made a K.C.S.I., 1861; G.C.S.I., 1866: lived at various places like an English gentleman, finally at Elvedon in Suffolk, which cost £283,000. His extravagance necessitated an inquiry into his debts in 1880. After this he turned against the British Government, wrote letters to the Times, etc. In 1886 he was allowed to revisit India, but, on his issuing a political proclamation to the Sikhs, claiming the Panjab, was stopped at Aden, in April, 1886: stayed there till June: abjured Christianity and re-embraced Sikhism: returned to England, a dissatisfied political refugee: Queen Victoria forgave his misconduct: he died in Paris Oct. 22, 1893.

SINGH, MAHARAJA RANJIT (1780-1839)

Maharaja: ruler of the Panjab: born Nov. 2, 1780: son of Sirdar Mahan Singh, whom he succeeded, in 1792, as head of the Sukarchakia branch of the Sikh confederacy: early in life he lost an eye from smallpox: at 17 he seized the government, and poisoned his mother: he allied with Shah Zaman, the Afghan ruler, when the latter invaded the Panjab: was given Lahore, 1799: in 1802 he attacked and annexed Umritsar. When Jaswant Rao Holkar took refuge with Ranjit in 1803, the latter made a treaty with the E.I. Co. to exclude Holkar from the Panjab: Ranjit seized Ludiana, and other States: (Sir C.) Metcalfe was sent on a Mission to negotiate with Ranjit in 1808, to frustrate his extending his dominions across the Satlaj, when the latter was making further annexations: a treaty was concluded at Umritsar on April 25, 1809, by which the E.I. Co. and Ranjit recognized the Satlaj as the boundary of his territories: he marched against Multan from 1806 until 1810, when he levied a ransom, and made it eventually a dependency: in 1810 he subdued the Nakkai and Kanheya Sikh confederacies: in 1812, having established his authority, he proclaimed himself Raja of the Panjab, and Maharaja in 1819: annexed Kashmir in 1819: by 1820 his power was consolidated between the Satlaj and the Indus: he made the city and province of Peshawar tributary in 1823. He received Shah Shuja when a fugitive from Afghanistan, and obtained the Kohinur diamond from him, as well as the Derajat and Peshawar in 1833: in 1835 the Amir Dost Muhammad attacked the Sikhs at Peshawar, but was compelled to retire. Ranjit employed European officers to train his troops: he kept at peace with the British Government and met Lord W. Bentinck at Roopur on Oct. 26, 1831. In 1838 he made a tripartite treaty with Shah Shuja and the British Government and helped Sir W. H. Macnaghten and the British force on their way to Afghanistan: he visited Lord Auckland, the Governor-General at Lahore, in 1838: he died June 27, 1839, of paralysis. Though uneducated, selfish and sensual, he, by natural ability and indefatigable labour, by his genius for military affairs and civil administration, built up the kingdom of the Panjab and created a large and trained army of Sikhs: he never failed in his alliance with the British Government.

THOMAS, JOHN (1757-1801)

Was the first Baptist Missionary in Bengal: born May 16, 1757, at Fairford, Gloucestershire: son of the deacon of the Baptist Chapel there: educated for the medical profession, and obtained an appointment in the Navy as Assistant Surgeon: poverty and debt caused him gladly to accept the post of Surgeon on the Earl of Oxford, a ship belonging to the E. I. Co.: sailed for Madras and Calcutta, 1783: made a second voyage in the same ship, 1786, when he decided to remain in India and become a Missionary to the Bengalis. His friend and patron was Charles Grant (q.v.): he first studied Bengali at Malda, residing there with Mr. Udney, commercial resident at the E. I. Co.'s factory there. After a visit to England, 1792-3, he returned to Bengal with Mr. Carey (q.v.) to work under the newly formed Baptist Missionary Society. His career was a sad one: though earnest in his Mission work, he wanted balance, and brought discredit on himself and his work by frequent misunderstandings with his friends and constant money difficulties. He and Carey were employed for a time as indigo factors by Udney: later Thomas was engaged in the sugar trade: but none of his undertakings prospered. Under the strain his mind gave way: though he recovered and resumed indigo cultivation, he was again unfortunate: died of fever at Dinajpur, 1801.

TIPPOO, SULTAN (1753-1799)

Born 1753: commanded a part of his father Hyder Ali's Army in the second Mysore war with the English: the death of his father was kept concealed until Tippoo could, from Malabar, rejoin the Army: he defeated General Matthews at Bednore and put him and others to death: he besieged and took Mangalore, and made a treaty with the English in March, 1784, regaining Canara and Malabar: he attacked Coorg, 1785: in 1786 he called himself "Padshah," a king: he fought against the Nizam and the Mahrattas, and made peace with them in 1787: he sent envoys to Turkey and France, with little success: in Dec. 1789 he attacked Travancore: was repulsed at first, but afterwards inflicted great damage: Cornwallis allied with the Mahrattas and the Nizam against Tippoo, who held his own against General Medows, but lost Malabar:

Cornwallis in person, in 1791, besieged and took Bangalore on March 21: attacked Seringapatam, but failed and had to retire: he took the Nandidrug and Savandrug forts, and again besieged Seringapatam in Feb. 1792, where, finding resistance hopeless, Tippoo yielded, and made great cessions of money and territory, but kept his throne and capital: Tippoo sought the aid of Zaman Shah, the Afghan ruler, and of the French in the Mauritius, against the English, but obtained little help. Lord Mornington, arriving in India in May, 1798, regarded Tippoo's conduct as openly hostile, and, failing to obtain any satisfaction from correspondence with him, declared war early in 1799. Tippoo's forces were defeated by the English under Generals Harris, Stuart, Baird, and Colonel Arthur Wellesley; and at the capture of Seringapatam, on May 4, 1799, by the English, Tippoo was killed: his sons were made prisoners and sent to Vellore: the greater part of his territory divided between the E. I. Co. and the Nizam: a portion being made over to the Hindu titular Raja of Mysore. His energy and ability as a ruler were overshadowed by his ferocity, cruelty and vindictiveness, and by the bigotry, fanaticism and duplicity which attach to his memory.

WELLINGTON, ARTHUR WELLESLEY, FIRST DUKE OF (1769-1852)

Commander-in-Chief and Prime Minister: fourth son of the first Earl of Mornington: born May 1, 1769: educated at Chelsea, Eton, and Angers in France: gazetted Ensign in March, 1787, and, passing through several regiments, became Major and Lt-Colonel in the 33rd regt. in 1793. After some campaigning in the Netherlands, 1794-5, and starting for the W. Indies, he landed with his regiment at Calcutta on Feb. 17, 1797. His brother, the Earl of Mornington, assumed office as Governor-General at Calcutta, on May 18, 1798. Wellesley commanded, as far as Penang, the Bengal Division of an expedition to Manila, but was recalled on account of Tippoo, who had been intriguing with the French and native courts to turn the English out of India. After negotiations, the war with Tippoo of Mysore broke out early in 1799: Wellesley commanded the Nizam's troops, invading Mysore: Tippoo's troops were routed at Malavalli, in March, 1799, by a Force under him: Tippoo was then besieged in Seringapatam by General Harris, Wellesley commanding the reserve during the attack, May 4, 1799. On its capture and the death of Tippoo, Wellesley was placed in command of Seringapatam, stopped the plundering, and restored order. He subsequently administered the lately conquered territory as Governor, with great ability: and hunted down "the freebooter of Mysore," Dhoondia Waugh, in Sep. 1800. In 1802-3, the Mahratta powers, Sindia, Holkar and the Raja of Berar, formed a confederacy against the English. General Wellesley, with the Madras Army, reached Poona in time to save it from destruction by Holkar. He was made Chief Political and Military Officer in the Dekkan and S. Mahratta country: after taking Admednagar on Aug. 12, he attacked, on Sep. 23, 1803, with about 8,000 men, including only about 1,500 Europeans, and defeated the whole Mahratta force of 50,000 men, near the village of Assaye. He was equally victorious in the battle of Argaum on Nov. 29, 1803, in which the Mahratta power was broken: he took Gawilghar on Dec. 15, 1803, and made peace by treaties which secured great cessions of territory to the E. I. Co. In 1804 he disbanded the Army of the Dekkan. At Bombay he was presented with a sword of honour, and before he left Madras for England, in March, 1805, was made K.C.B.: declined the Commander-in-Chiefship of Bombay. The remainder of his career is included in English and European history. He died at Walmer, Sep. 14, 1852.

responding member of the Institute of France : President of the Hakluyt Society, 1877 : and of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1885 : died Dec. 30, 1889.

ZAMAN SHAH ABDALI (before 1793—[after 1800])

[Grandson of Ahmad Shah Abdali, or Durani, ruler of Afghanistan, who died 1773 : and son of Timur Shah, who died 1793. He reigned oppressively at Kabul, and reduced to poverty Payinda Khan, the Barakzai chief, to whom he owed his throne. He marched on Lahore, 1796, reduced the Sikhs, threatened to invade Hindustan, and invited Lord Wellesley to join with him in conquering the Mahrattas. The fear of an Afghan invasion was seriously regarded by Lord Wellesley, but came to nothing. Zaman Shah returned to Afghanistan, to establish his authority at Kandahar, and had the leading Barakzais massacred. He was dethroned by his brother Mahmud Mirza of Herat, assisted by Fateh Khan Barakzai, about 1800, and was blinded : Zaman Shah fled to Ludiana, and became a pensioner of the E. I. Co.

E. Carey of the first Baptist Church at Calcutta: was afterwards pastor of the second: preached in the Fort: laboured in education, scientific pursuits and music: had considerable knowledge of chronology, mineralogy and botany: made researches in cryptogamous plants: published Orient Harping and other works, besides a volume of poems: died Oct. 22, 1825.

LUDLOW, JOHN, (1801-1882)

Maj-General: eldest son of Edmund Ludlow: born in Monmouthshire, May 16, 1801: educated at Merchant Taylors' School: became, in 1819, an Ensign in the E. I. Co.'s 3rd Regt. N.I.: served in the first Burmese and Bhil wars: appointed to the Political Department in 1832: Assistant A.G.G. in Rajputana, 1835: Political Agent at Jodhpur, 1839-44; and at Jaipur, 1844-7: while there he carried out a system of uniform and fixed ceremonial presents at weddings throughout Rajputana: this went far to check the infanticide which was common in anticipation of the pecuniary burdens associated with the rearing of female children. By pointing out that the most ancient Hindu scriptures forbade, and did not inculcate, Suttee, he persuaded the Head Priest at Jaipur to advocate its abolition and brought the Council of Regency to discourage and forbid the practice in 1846. Thereupon many of the Rajput and other states prohibited it: the A.G.G. for Rajputana attributed their prohibition almost exclusively to Ludlow's influence: and Lord Hardinge thanked him. He became Lieut-Colonel, 1850: Colonel, 1853: and Maj-General, 1856, after his return to England: married and lived for many years at Yotes Court in Kent, and died there Nov. 30, 1882: he had great muscular strength: was fond of literature and quotation: he always spoke with admiration and regard for the Rajputs.

MACPHERSON, REV. DUNCAN
(1837-1881)

Born at Fort St. George, 1837: went out to Bombay as Chaplain of the Church of Scotland, arriving Mar. 1860: stationed at Poona, Belgaum, Karachi, 1862: was Chaplain of St. Andrew's, Bombay, until his death: besides his pastoral work, he laboured indefatigably on behalf of Scottish and other British Railway Engineers, and others in Bombay: founded, with others, the Bombay Scottish Education Society: was Fellow of the Bombay University and Member of the Senate: for several years Examiner, chiefly in Literature and Mental Science: was greatly esteemed for his public services and high character: his Last Words, with a memoir by the Rev. Robert Geoffrey, Minister of the Free Scottish Church, 1882, form a memorial of him: he died Aug. 188r.

SHEPHERD, JAMES (? - ?)

Colonel: served under Ambaji Inglia, 1799, and assisted very materially in the overthrow of Lakwa Dada at Sounda in 1801. On the breaking out of war with the English, Shepherd and his party passed over to the Company's service, and he distinguished himself in Bundelkund in 1804, when he gave the celebrated freebooter Amir Khan, a sound beating at Maltaon Ghat, and on June 24 completed his discomfiture by entirely defeating and dispersing his force near Koonch. Shepherd's Corps at this time consisted of 3,180 men and was highly praised for its efficiency when Gen. Lake reviewed it in 1805.

SHEPHERD, W. J. (? - 1891)

Son of Colonel James Shepherd (q.v.): on the outbreak of the Mutiny in 1857 he took a conspicuous part in the defence of Wheeler's entrenchment at Cawnpur, eventually leaving the entrenchment to glean information of the enemy's movements, by whom he was captured and sentenced by the Nana Sahib to hard labour. He was one of the few survivors of Wheeler's entrenchment, and was congratulated by the late Lord Dufferin: died at Lucknow, 1891.

STRANGE, JAMES CHARLES STUART (1753-1840)

Born 1753: eldest son of the Scotch engraver, Sir Robert Strange: educated at the college of Navarre, Paris: obtained a writership in the E. I. Co.'s service: reached Madras, July, 1773: held lucrative posts until invalided home, 1780: returned to India, 1785: compiled a scheme (based on Capt. Cook's voyage of 1778) for the establishment of a trade in furs by the E. I. Co. between the N.W. coast of America and the ports of China. The Bombay Government placed at his disposal two experienced officers from their Marine and a small party of picked soldiers: a Bombay merchant, David Scott, provided funds for the purchase and equipment of the two small vessels. Strange had entire control of the expedition, embarking the whole of his private fortune in it, and sailed from Bombay, Dec. 1785: financially the voyage proved a failure: Strange found himself forestalled by other adventurers, one from Calcutta reaching Nootka Sound just before him in 1786: but his journals and chart forwarded to the Court of Directors contained valuable additions to the geographical knowledge of N.W. America: he forwarded to the Court on his return to India, 1788, a detailed scheme for a permanent trading station at Nootka Sound, where he had left his surgeon, Mackay, (who was kidnapped and carried off to Macao by a rival trader). Strange was Collector and Paymaster of Tanjore, until he retired in 1795: he was M.P. for East Grinstead, 1797-1802: he lost his considerable fortune as partner in a bank which failed, and was allowed by the Court of Directors, in consideration of the special circumstances, to return to the Madras service, 1803-4: there he was Magte.-Collr. at Pondicherry, 1806, Judge of Court of Appeal, Southern Division, 1807: Postmaster-General and Senior Member of the Board of Trade, 1813-5: retiring Jan. 1, 1816: he died in 1840.

SUBBYAR, S. SHUNGRA (1836-1904)

Born April, 1836, of respectable parentage: educated in a Travancore State Seminary: served as a schoolmaster: Assistant to the Diwan in the Police, Educational and other Departments: as Diwan Pesikar and District Officer in several districts: was Special Commissioner in boundary disputes with the Cochin State: in the Revenue Settlement for nine years: Diwan in 1892: retired, 1898: effected administrative improvements, his services being highly appreciated: C.I.E., 1897: Member of the Madras Legislative Council, 1898: died Sept. 1904.

Sonnenschein's Standard Books of Reference

ENGLISH QUOTATIONS

BY

COLONEL PHILIP HUGH DALBIAIC

Third Edition. Small Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"The most extensive Dictionary of Quotations yet supplied, and, thanks to its arrangement and its Indexes to Authors and Words, it simplifies greatly the task of reference."—Notes and Queries.

"No book of English Quotations can be at all compared to the present, either in fulness or in accuracy. . . . If the succeeding volumes in any degree reach the high level of excellence and of accuracy to be found in the present work, Colonel Dalbiaic and his fellow-writer will have accomplished an invaluable work."—Morning Post.

"A mine of curious inquiry. . . . A very industrious and entertaining companion."—Spectator.

"Up to date and admirably explicit in the matter of references."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"The quotations have been selected with excellent judgment, and they are given with remarkable accuracy; indeed, in all respects the book is the best of the kind that I have seen."—Truth.

"Decidedly a work to possess."—Publishers' Circular.

"As near an approach to the ideal work as one might wish for."—Nottingham Express.

"Remarkably comprehensive."—Daily Telegraph.

"An improvement upon Bartlett's and other well-known works."—Times.

"A very useful book, which will furnish valuable services to every teacher and friend of English."—Anglia (translated).

"The fulness and accuracy of its references make it worthy of a place in every library where scholarship is valued."—Scotsman.

"A work which must have entailed a vast amount of patient and intelligent labour, and which, in addition to the intrinsic interest which it possesses, cannot fail to be of service to a very wide section of the cultured public."—Glasgow Herald.

"This Dictionary of Quotations is a distinct advance on all its predecessors in that it gives the fullest possible reference to chapter and verse for each quotation."—Journal of Education.

"An excellent collection in prose and verse. There is nothing superfluous in the quotations; there are few quotations unworthy of their place, and really obvious omissions are few in number."—Yorkshire Post.

"The result is a handsome volume of 528 pages, which will probably displace many other and older compilations."—Educational Review.

CLASSICAL QUOTATIONS

BY

T. B. HARBOTTLE

Second Edition. Small Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"In point of execution and general get-up the volume leaves little to be desired."—Bristol Times.

"The work is far and away the very best of its kind for two reasons. It is the most comprehensive and the most accurate of all such works, and, what is more, it often brings the reader back from a stereotyped, erroneous form of the quotation to its correct and original form."—Morning Post.

"The work appears to us altogether admirable in method and execution."—University Correspondent.

"A perusal of Mr Harbottle's book has afforded us unwonted pleasure, and we shall give it a place at our elbow for future use."—Literary World.

"Invaluable to authors and readers."—Educational Review.

"A more comprehensive collection than any we have seen."—Athenæum.

"The book is well done."—Times.

"Is marked by praiseworthy fulness of material and neatness of arrangement."—World.

"The scholar is to be congratulated upon the appearance of this second volume. It will greatly facilitate the task of research, and forms an indispensable portion of the student's library. He that hath but few books is bound to have this."—Notes and Queries.

"The most complete, the most handy, and the most correctly-printed book of its kind."—Glasgow Herald.

"Remarkably complete, accuracy has been well studied."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"The most complete book of its kind yet published."—Alma Mater.

FRENCH AND ITALIAN QUOTATIONS

BY

COLONEL PHILIP HUGH DALBIAO AND T. B. HARBOTTLE

Small Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"A very interesting and valuable book. The best informed of us may learn something, probably a good deal, from it."—Spectator.

"It provides for a 'felt want.'"—Literature.

"The compilation has been made with every care, and the volume could not but enrich any reference library."—Scotsman.

"The range is wide and the translations are wide, and in some cases even scholarly."—Saturday Review.

"Admirably rich in both Italian and French Quotations."—Notes and Queries.

"The accuracy distinguishing previous numbers of this series is also noticeable here."—Bookseller.

"The collection is extensive, and the book will certainly be found very useful."—Liverpool Post.

"Messrs Harbottle and Dalbiao have produced a very useful and interesting book. An enterprise of this kind bears evidence of immense labour; the rendering of the original into English is for the most part accurate and polished and the arrangement and indexing very clear."—Speaker.

"A very useful compilation."—Times of India.

DICTIONARY OF HISTORICAL ALLUSIONS

BY

T. B. HARBOTTLE

Small Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"This volume should be of very great service to all classes of readers. . . . The work should take a place on the shelf of indispensable elbow books."—Literary World.

"It is only by continued use that the excellences and defects of such a compilation become known, but we have applied several tests with satisfactory results."—Manchester Guardian.

"It is a book that will prove invaluable not only to the student of the history of ancient and modern times but also to the ordinary newspaper reader."—Dundee Courier.

"A very complete and useful commonplace book of historical facts and points."—Liverpool Post.

"Extremely well done, and will undoubtedly prove a great 'time-saver' to the busy man and woman."—Education.

"An extremely useful book . . . one that should have a place in every well-informed man's library."—Yorkshire Post.

"One of those books which should always be within reach of the studious reader."—Dundee Advertiser.

"A book which no writer or public speaker can afford to be without."—New Age.

"The information is conveyed with brevity and accuracy."—Glasgow Herald.

WHAT GREAT MEN HAVE SAID ABOUT GREAT MEN

BY

WILLIAM WALE

Small Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"May be taken up at any time, ransacked with satisfaction, and laid aside."—Notes and Queries.

"A book which will give many hours' pleasure to the intelligent user."—Yorkshire Post.

"An invaluable book of reference for students, readers, journalists, and speakers."—Book Trade.

"A very useful book."—Spectator.

"Includes much that is of interest and value."—Athenaeum.

"Mr Wale has shown great discretion in his selection of the great men who have talked and been talked about."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"A work of great value to all public speakers, authors, essayists, journalists, etc."—Newsagent.

"The book has a certain resemblance to a biographical dictionary. Talent and genius are best criticised by talent and genius."—Scotsman.

CONTEMPORARY ENGLISH QUOTATIONS

BY

HELENA SWAN

Small Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"This series of quotations, now six in number, has the conspicuous merit of carrying a system of classification further than any previous undertaking of the kind, and the new volume is one of the most happily conceived and useful of all."—Notes Guardian.

"This book, with a large net, as every general Dictionary should be . . . It will form a valuable adjunct to any literary library."—Scotsman.

"The work of research, appreciation, selection, and presentation has been well performed."—Dumfries Courier.

"A very excellent piece of work."—New Age.

"The book was a happy thought, and it will usefully fill a long-felt gap."—Liverpool Post.

"A generally admirable work, which owes its excellence to the judgment and scholarship of its compiler."—Bookseller.

"The work seems to have been done with unwearying patience and much taste."—London Quarterly Review.
